THE TRACTION FAKE.

Cleveland Disgusted With Mayor Johnson's Methods.

Convenience and Safety Are Ignored to Keep Three Cent Fare System From Bankruptcy—Loss of Time and Comfort Far Outweigh the Saving in Pennies.

Semi-municipal ownership of street cars does not seem to be giving the satisfaction that was anticipated. The Municipal Traction company is really the city of Cleveland disguised to evade a state law, and, according to the Cleveland papers, it is defying state laws and city ordinances in a way that would bring Mayor Johnson into action in ten minutes if the lawbreaker were an ordinary corporation.

Perhaps the worst example of this is the blocking shut the derailleurs at grade crossings and drawbridges, which are designed automatically to prevent a car running through an open draw or being run down by a train. The most fruitful trolley accidents have been due to the absence of such derailleurs as have now been put out of service in Cleveland.

The law has also been defied by the breaking of the fare and service contracts with suburban towns which were inherited from the Cleveland Electric Railway company, cursed while alive, but now of blessed memory.

The following editorials from two of the principal Cleveland dailies show the trend of local sentiment. Under the caption "Making It Pay" the News says:

"The ancient maxim 'The king can do no wrong' has been translated into the modern phrase 'The municipal traction company may do what it pleases.'"

"What are laws and ordinances for the convenience of citizens or for the preservation of their lives if such legal restraint interferes with the successful demonstration of three cent fare?"

"Safety devices upon drawbridges have been brushed aside. The other day a man with both legs cut off lay for fifteen minutes under a car which carried no jack. Such a device seems to have been scarce upon all the cars blockaded by the accident."

"Upon East Fifty-fifth street have appeared the old dinky cars equipped with hand brakes. Even the traction company has scarcely checked enough to post its famous 'This Is Your Property' notice in these antiquated cars."

"The Superior avenue line has been reduced fifteen and the Lorain avenue service ten cents."

"So it goes all over the city. Three cent fare, to be sure, unless one needs to transfer. But what service! It may be made to 'pay' the traction company, but will it 'pay' the city?"

"Somewhat more judiciously the Leader deals with these and other shortcomings under the caption 'Dear Bought Economies.'"

"Some of the so called economies which the so called Municipal Traction company is practicing are costly to the public. The saving to the corporation is more than offset by the loss to its patrons."

"In some instances the partial or complete withdrawal of street cars from lines which do not yield sufficient revenue to satisfy Mayor Johnson and his associates in the traction business has damaged property more than enough to balance the saving to the company which promised Cleveland better service in every respect as well as lower fare. On many lines the increased intervals between cars are causing such long waiting by thousands of passengers that if their time is counted as worth only a modest sum by the hour or the day the loss which they undergo is much more than enough to offset the profits of poor service to the corporation which is responsible for it."

"Another traction company saving costly to the people of Cleveland is the change in the rate of fare to the suburbs. It means less health and pleasure for the poor, less comfortable summers, less satisfaction in life. That sort of economy for the railroad company is far from profitable to the public. The effect of cutting off open cars in warm weather will be similar to the changes which are so adverse to the development of the suburbs and the spreading out of the city into the inviting and wholesome country around Cleveland. It will be a form of saving which cannot fail to be burdensome to the community."
