PEGGY'S ADVICE.

Why It Suddenly Changed From Excellent to Worthless.
 It was the era of the first Quincy baby, and the attention of the entire Quincy family, consisting solely of mother and father, was directed to the proper upbringing of the infant. Books on babyhood were bought and digested. Suitable magazines were subscribed for. Friends and mothers were consulted on every point. But to the wonder of the solicitous Mrs. Quincy declared that the advice that did the most good was that which appeared in the morning paper, signed with the feebly name "Peggy." But the time came when even that was discarded.
 "Aren't you going to read me the little lesson from the Journal for today?" asked Mr. Quincy at the breakfast table.
 "I shall never read that stuff to any one any more," said the mother firmly.
 "Why not? Only day before yesterday you were saying what excellent recommendations Peggy made about crying children. Why do you desert her?"
 "I'll tell you, Tom," she said. "I had meant not to say a word about it, because it is so humiliating, but now you've spoken—well, I might as well confess. The paper yesterday said something I didn't quite understand, and, as I was downtown, I thought I'd just run into the office and ask Peggy what she meant. So I did. The office boy smiled when I asked for Peggy, but he took me up a lot of dirty stairs and then pointed to a door. I knocked, and a voice answered, 'Come in!'
 "Well?" queried her husband.
 "Well, there isn't any Peggy! Not a woman at all, but a perfectly horrid, grinning man, smoking a cigar! He writes that advice—a man! What do you think of that, Tom?"
 Mrs. Quincy paused in her indignation.
 "I thought you found the advice good, as a rule," he objected.
 "Tom Quincy, how could a man in a newspaper office write good advice to mothers? I am surprised! You men think you know everything!"—Youth's Companion.
One Way of Getting Out.
 Gaston burst like a whirlwind in upon his friend Alphonse. "Will you be my witness?" he cried.
 "Going to fight?"
 "No; going to get married."
 Alphonse after a pause inquired, "Can't you apologize?"
