What Mrs. Kate Taylor has to Say About the World's Greatest purely

Health and Accident Insurance Co.

Eugene, Or., Sept. 25, 1908. Continental Casualty Co., Portland, Oregon.

Dear Sirs:—

I wish to thank you and the Continental Casualty Company for the $400.00 draft which you gave me today, which covers in full the claim for the accidental drowning of my husband, Arthur E. Taylor, in the McKenzie river recently. I have received most prompt and liberal treatment from your company; my husband had only carried his policy with you for about forty days, and had only paid his first month's premium of $1.25 a short time before his death occurred. You have given this claim just as prompt attention as though my husband had been a policy holder with you for many years, instead of so few days. I am indeed surprised to receive my check for $400.00 today, as I only sent you the final proof papers last Saturday night, Sept. 19th.

I certainly can and do heartily recommend the Continental Casualty Company, and you as their district manager, to everyone who needs accident and health insurance. Your company justly deserves the excellent reputation they have for prompt and liberal treatment to all its policy holders and I sincerely hope that you will continue to have success in your work in securing new policy holders in this territory and elsewhere.

Again thanking you and your company, I beg to remain, Very sincerely yours, MRS. KATE TAYLOR, Eugene, Oregon.

Sigmund Ernest represents this company in Oregon City, and will remain here until the first of the year. He is well known to the people of this city and will be pleased to write policies for any and all and explain the benefits to be derived from the same.

GRANT AND A. T. STEWART.

Nomination of the Merchant For Secretary of the Treasury.

It was not unnatural that in the absence of political experience President Grant should not only have had much to learn concerning the nature and conduct of civil government, but that he should also have had much to unlearn of the mental habits and the ways of thinking he had acquired in the exercise of large—indeed, almost unlimited—military command. This was strikingly illustrated by some remarkable incidents.

As usual, the nominations made by the president for cabinet officers were promptly ratified by the senate without being referred to any committee. But after this had been done it was remembered and reported to President Grant that one of the nominees was confirmed, A. T. Stewart of New York, whom President Grant had selected for the secretaryship of the treasury, as a person engaged in commerce was disqualified by one of the oldest laws on the statute book—in fact, the act of Sept. 2, 1789, establishing the treasury department. That this law, which provided that the treasury department, having the administration of the custom houses under its control, should not have at its head a merchant or importer in active business, was entirely proper—indeed, a necessary one—had never been questioned. The next morning, March 6, I had occasion to call upon President Grant for the purpose of presenting to him a congratulatory message from certain citizens of St. Louis. I found him alone engaged in writing something on a half sheet of note paper. "Mr. President," I said, "I see you are busy, and I do not wish to interrupt you. My business can wait." "Never mind," he answered, "I am only writing a message to the senate." My business was quickly disposed of, and I withdrew.

In the course of that day's session of the senate a message from the president was brought in in which, after quoting the statute of Sept. 2, 1789, the president asked that Mr. Stewart be exempted by joint resolution of the two houses of congress from the operation of the law which stood in the way of Stewart's way. There were some signs of surprise among senators when the message was read, and Mr. Sherman at once asked unanimous consent to introduce a bill in accordance with the president's wish. But Mr. Sumner objected to the immediate consideration thereof because of its great importance. This stopped further proceedings, and the bill was laid on the table, never to be heard of again.—Carl Schurz's Reminiscences in McClure's.

Miles and the Reporter.

"General Nelson A. Miles always did like to have fun with new reporters," said an old newspaper man. "I remember some years ago he told an unfortunate Washington correspondent a long story about a new gun metal that some genius was supposed to have just discovered. It was a wonderful alloy which was as tough as steel and as light as aluminum. By its use, the general said, it would be possible to build guns which would weigh no more than the immense projectiles which they fired."

"The correspondent was delighted and went off and wrote a beautiful article, which produced spasms of laughter throughout the entire artillery service. You see, it didn't require a very profound knowledge of ballistics to know that if a gun and projectile both weigh exactly the same amount they would fly in opposite directions with exactly the same velocity when the piece was fired."

City of Mexico Street Cars.

The street car system of the city of Mexico is a fine one, but here is one arbitrary rule that strangers must learn as soon as possible—that is, the cars do not stop except at certain points, where you will notice the electric light poles have a band of white painted on them. These stopping places are very close together in the crowded parts of the city, so you must look out for them. You are expected, too, to enter at the back and go out at the front door. Apart from this, the conductors will be found courteous, ever ready to tell you things and anxious to assist you.—Houston Post.

No One Questions It.

An automobile party was touring through a mountainous district of one of the states and had made a stop in one of the small towns to make son repairs to the machine. While the waited the attention of one of the party was called to an intelligent looking lad of about fourteen who seemed to be very much interested in the work among whom the following question was asked: "Say, son, what do you live on out here?" "Nuthin'," replied the somewhat surprised youth. "Dad's a preacher."—Judge.

Object, Matrimony.

"I want to put an ad. in your paper," said the weary looking man. "Make it. I wanted, a situation—any old job." "Shall I say 'wages no object?'" suggested the clerk. "No; make it 'object matrimony.' If I could get acquainted with a decent job I'd be willing to marry it for 'em."—Catholic Standard and Times

Gaining the End.

D'Aubert—Do you think my battle picture expresses, as I have meant it, to all the poignant horrors of war? Kritick—Oh, yes; it's the awfulest thing I ever saw.—Cleveland Leader.

Ridicule is a keen weapon, but the things that succumb to ridicule deserve to die.

How to Avoid Pneumonia.

We have never heard of a single instance of a cold resulting in pneumonia or other lung trouble when Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken. It not only stops the cough, but heals and strengthens the lungs. Ask for Foley's Honey and Tar and refuse any substitute offered. Dr. C. J. Bishop, of Agnew, Mich., writes: "I have used Foley's Honey and Tar in three very severe cases of pneumonia with good results in every case." Jones Drug Co.
