The Best Working Hen.

The public has been told by good authority that the American hen is a great agent of prosperity. The proceeds of her industry, if all directed to one purpose, would do surprising financial "stunts" for the nation. Yet the ways of the hens and of the hen owners are so simple and so primitive, but so successful withal, that it is a question whether any good can come from attempts to systematize and expand the elements of production, whatever may be done with regard to marketing. Hens are known to be very erratic, and, taking the whole field over, about everything connected with their industry is erratic up to the point where the eggs land in the hands of the first buyer.

It could probably be proved that under the present haphazard system of the country 5,000 hens under 100 small owners net twice the profit accruing where 5,000 are distributed among ten owners. The keeper of a few hens can show that the cost of keeping a hen is really nothing, because she is fed on waste and what she picks up in the main, and all the hen feed purchased is more than returned in food for the owner's table, so that the returns on eggs sold are clear gain. The small owner gives personal care to his stock and manages to get the best results. The large owner cannot give the same kind of care and may be keeping stock which earns nothing.

The small owner of hens usually gets the highest prices for eggs. There must be a good market at hand to attract small owners to the business, but the large owner must sell for what he can get and may often stand a loss. The magnitude of the business done by small owners is not to be gauged by statistics of shipments and sales in the chief markets. Throughout all the thickly settled region within 150 miles of New York the cackle of the busy hen rises in one continuous peean all the morning, and yet experts say that if all the eggs raised for sale in Connecticut, New Jersey and southern New York were poured into New York city markets alone the supply would not begin to go around. Not a half or a quarter of them do get to the city market, because they are bought up nearer home and consumed before they are a day old. This is the small owner's opportunity—personal attention to a small flock and "fresh egg" prices for the product. The local demand for fresh eggs increases constantly, and the best caterers to it are the owners of a small parcel of land and a few hens and who also engage in other business.

Contest Notice

Department of the Interior, United States Land Office, Portland, Oregon, December 29, 1908.
A sufficient contest affidavit having been filed in this office by John O. Wyman, contestant, against Homestead Entry No. 14978, made June 23, 1903, for S. E. 1/4 of S. 1/4, Section 30, Township 3 South, Range 6 E, by James E. Kershaw, contestee, in which it is alleged that he is well acquainted with the tract of land entered in the homestead entry and knows the present condition of the same; also that said James E. Kershaw has never resided on said land for the last three years to my knowledge and also that the only improvements made on said land by James E. Kershaw were one shake cabin 14x16 feet outside, and having no windows, doors or furniture whatever, and that the said alleged absence from the said land was not due to his employment in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States as a private soldier, officer, seaman or marine during the war with Spain or during any other war in which the United States may be engaged.
Said parties are hereby notified to appear, respond and offer evidence touching said allegation at 10 o'clock a. m. on February 10th, 1909, before the Register and Receiver at the United States Land Office in Portland, Oregon.
The said contestant having, in a proper affidavit, filed November 30th, 1908, set forth facts which show that after due diligence personal service of this notice cannot be made, it is hereby ordered and directed that such notice be given by due and proper publication.
ALGERNON S. DRESSER,
