FALLS INTO LONG SLEEP

Third Time in Two Years Malady Overtakes Beulah Hawkins.
Los Angeles, May 3.—Mrs. Beulah Hawkins for the third time in the last two years has passed into a state of complete coma and her strange case is again puzzling physicians. She was stricken after feeling for several days that she was again about to go into a long sleep. She fought the strange malady, but at last it overcame her and she now lies at her home, as though dead, save for a faint breathing and an occasional fluttering of the eyelids.

Two years ago Mrs. Hawkins was overcome and for several weeks remained in a trance. Exactly one year ago she was stricken for the second time and for 85 days lay unconscious. After her recovery from former attacks she recovered her health and mental faculties quickly and seemed to be none the worse.

ASSAY OFFICE AT THE FAIR

Machinery for the Exposition Plant Being Installed.
Seattle, May 4.—Seattle will have two fully-equipped assay offices in operation this season, engaged in receiving bullion shipments of a record-breaking year of Alaska gold production. Besides the main Seattle office, a duplicate of the existing office will be in operation at the government building at the A-Y-P grounds, where the Alaska miner or consignee of gold may deposit his shipment, have it assayed and weighed, and can receive his pay check, either at the grounds or at the downtown office.

A part of the machinery for the exposition plant is already on the grounds, and is being installed next to the exhibit of the mint bureau. By June 1 everything will be ready for operation, and visitors may watch every stage of the work of assaying, weighing and melting the precious metal.

CANNERS CANNOT HAVE A MONOPOLY OF LABEL

Washington, May 4.—There can be no monopoly in the use of the word "sockeye" in designating the species of salmon canned by any of the salmon-packing interests of the Pacific Coast or of Alaska, nor is a packer required to state on the label of his can the locality in which the salmon is taken, according to a decision by Solicitor Earle, for the department of commerce and labor, in an informal opinion to the United States Fish commission.

It was pointed out by the commission's communication that the same species of fish packed by the Alaska salmon industries and labeled as the "sockeye" was caught also in Puget Sound and the waters of British Columbia and canned under a label identical with that used for the product of the Alaskan fisheries—"sockeye." But it was stated that while the fish caught in those two localities were of the same species, there was a difference in their quality of value, the difference in market price being 50 per cent in favor of the Puget Sound waters and the waters of British Columbia.
