ALFALFA AS A ROTATION CROP.

It is practically the unanimous expression of all who have succeeded in growing alfalfa, no matter in what section of the country the experiment was tried, that it exceeds any other crop in its value as a feed for livestock, and that without restricting it to any one kind of stock, it is excellent food for working horses. In Roswell, New Mexico, the lively horses, which are notoriously hard worked, are turned into a lot where there are racks of alfalfa hay, there to eat their fill, and it is but very seldom that any grain is given them. As a fattening food for cattle it is unsurpassed, and hogs may be made almost fit for market on it alone, but they are usually topped off with corn to add weight. Sheep and poultry thrive on it and even hares and rabbits get rolling fat on it. All the species named like it and will forsake all other kinds to pick it out; these things about alfalfa are conceded, but the wonderful crop possesses a yet greater value, and that is as a restorer of the soil.

A crop to be acceptable to the average farmer as a soil restorer must be a rotation crop as well. It is not enough that the crop merely possesses the power to add nitrogen to the soil. If it must be left for years before the benefits are available, then it will never gain great favor with the majority of the farmers. Alfalfa has been looked upon as an ideal crop for hay, soiling and pasture, but its place as rotation crop has never been accorded to, as yet.

Red clover has been compared with alfalfa as a rotation crop to the disadvantage of the latter. Farmers are being constantly warned not to forsake the old friend, red clover, for the new alfalfa.

This is alright so far as it goes, and if alfalfa cannot be shown to be a desirable rotation crop, then the farmers will not be expected to adopt it as such. But it is rapidly coming into favor as a rotation crop, and instances are not lacking where it has done the work as such in a truly remarkable way. Experiments will be tried this coming spring in many sections of the country and by next fall the reports will be gathered and the information given to the farmers under the seal of authority. It is conceded that two or three well defined experiments may not be enough to prove any sweeping claims for alfalfa as a rotation crop, but they surely can be accepted as an indication that red clover, with its single hay crop each season, may find an important competitor in alfalfa for this desirable and honorable position with the American agriculturists.

In some sections of Indiana, alfalfa has been grown for many years, and there are numerous examples of its eminent fitness as a rotation crop. Two instances will suffice for the present time. Wm. V. Rooker, a prominent Indianapolis lawyer, owns a large farm seven miles northeast of the capital city of Indiana. At the time Mr. Rooker purchased the farm it was yielding 30 to 35 bushels of corn per acre. It is clay upland, and is not looked upon as the very best out of doors. Mr. Rooker decided to try alfalfa in rotation with corn, and after growing a crop of alfalfa planted it up the following spring and planted in corn. The corn crop yielded 120 bushels per acre on eighteen acres in the field. This is not an estimated yield, but the actual yield by weights. The facts and figures can be substantiated in the fullest manner. It is not strange that Mr. Rooker is an adherent of the theory that alfalfa does well in rotation with corn. And that is not all. The alfalfa was sown in the spring and two crops were cut that season, making about three tons per acre or a valuation of $30 per acre. Then in the fall the field was returned when the condition of the ground was fit, which added materially to the value of the corn. This system of rotation, one year in alfalfa and the next in corn, will probably be continued as long as that farm is under the control of its present owner.

The other instance referred to is that of Henry Snider, a well known farmer of Delaware County, Indiana. Mr. Snider started in with alfalfa several years ago. After allowing his fields to stand for three years he plowed up the alfalfa sod and planted corn. The result was astonishing, and converted Mr. Snider to the belief that alfalfa as a rotation crop with corn was an entire success.

These experiments could be repeated over and over again in the instances of Indiana farmers, and doubt-

Feeding Young Lambs.

A good flockmaster holds that for young lambs wheat bran is most excellent to begin with, and after they become stronger the bran should be mixed with corn meal in equal parts. He says that oat meal or oats when they can eat it, should be added to balance the ration, for oats is nearly a balanced food itself. After growing a little they will shell and crack their own corn, if given to them on the cob. The lambs that are to remain on the farm should not be forced so fast. They need plenty of food, but the grain ration should be small and no corn should be used. They should be given plenty of exercise and an abundance of good pasture when possible. Corn tends to breeders of short season. Wheat bran and oats are probably the two safest food materials that can be used. When the grass becomes stronger is not needed for those lambs that are to remain on the farm, and only the corn will remain as the dry feed ration for the market lambs. The grass is better than any other nitrogenous food.

A new feature in the Umatilla project is the demonstration farm which is being operated by the reclamation service in conjunction with the state and United States agricultural department. Forty acres of land have been placed under irrigation, buildings have been erected by the reclamation service and an extensive system of experimental work for the benefit of settlers will be started at once.

OREGON STATE NEWS

Interesting Happenings From All Parts of the State.

Will Build Railroad at Once.

Portland—Barring unexpected delays in securing a continuous right of way, bids for the construction of the Deschutes line into Central Oregon will be asked by Harriman within 30 days. The only obstacle that prevents the immediate construction of the Central Oregon road is the adjustment of right of way questions with power companies operating on the Deschutes river. The railroad company already has secured rights of way to 70 per cent of the 120 miles to be traversed by the proposed road. An early and satisfactory adjustment of pending right of way problems covering the remainder of the distance is believed more than probable without resorting to condemnation proceedings in the courts.

Cut Settler's Fence.

Bend—More than half a mile of wire fence surrounding the recently acquired homestead of H. C. Barney has been cut, presumably by cattleman, allowing cattle to enter on his land and letting escape upon the desert a number of horses. Barney had been absent for several days with a surveying party in the mountains, and upon his return found a large portion of the fence about his 160-acre homestead entirely destroyed. Fastened to a tree the marauders had left a notice which read: "Take right road to Bend, Shaniko and all points east. (Signed) "BLACK JACK SKINNERS."

Thus far no clue to the identities of the parties concerned has been obtained.

Porteus in Hiding?

Roseburg—Local officers place little credence in the report that E. J. Porteus, manager of the Rogue River Mining & Development Company, is dead, having received the assurance that he lives. Late developments in the case are to the effect that Porteus left West Fork on the day of his mysterious disappearance in company with a woman, both of whom bought tickets to Portland. It is not thought, however, that they intended to go to Portland, but simply purchased tickets in an effort to elude suspicion. Roseburg officers assert that Porteus is in hiding near here, and that he is accompanied by a woman.

Fund to Fight Forest Fires.

Portland—For the fiscal year beginning July 1, next, the forest service has been allotted $61,000 to be expended in this state in the construction of roads, trails, cabins and telephone lines through the national forest reserves. This fund, which has been available, will be expended principally in building roads and trails into inaccessible parts of the 13 reserves in this state as a necessary preliminary to fighting fires.

University Recognizes 46 Schools.

Eugene—There are 46 preparatory schools in Oregon which the University of Oregon recognizes as accredited high schools and from which institutions a graduate student can enter the state university without passing entrance examinations. An accredited high school is one which has a four-year course, with at least nine months' school each year.

Auto Upsets and Injures Three.

Independence—In an automobile accident Saturday afternoon between here and Monmouth, a machine belonging to Moose Winters, of Portland, was ruined and Mr. Winters, A. Tetherow and E. W. Strong of Monmouth, were seriously injured. Mr. Winters was driving the machine at a fast rate, when Strong in some manner shoved Winters' cap over his eyes, causing him to swerve the machine to the side of the road.

Town on Wrong Plot.

Albany—To correct an error in recording the original town of Brownsville, which makes the legal town six miles distant from its actual location, Attorney A. A. Tussing, of Brownsville, has filed a suit in the State circuit court here, the purpose of which is to reform the plat.

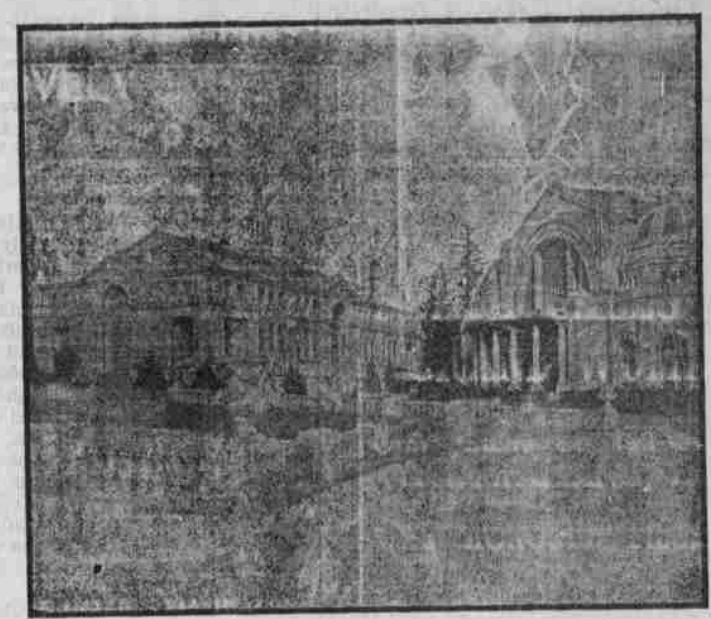

Eggs of 'Shad' Collected.

Oregon City—Dennis Winn, who is in charge of the shad station at Williamette Falls for the United States bureau of fisheries, has collected 500,000 shad eggs during the past week and the total take is expected to exceed that of last year, when 2,000,000 eggs were taken.

Indians Given $65,000.

Pendleton—More than $65,000 was paid out to the Indians on the Umatilla reservation last week. This was the first payment of rent money made since last fall, and some Indians drew as much as $600.

Born Friday to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Willock, a daughter.

A PORTION OF THE CASCADE COURT.

The Palace of Oriental Exhibits forms one of the twelve mammoth display buildings first completed by the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition. Its lines are in pleasing contrast to the Agricultural and Manufacturers buildings, with which they are grouped, and their position overlooks the beautiful formal gardens and water display of the Cascades and Geyser Basin.

The exhibit placed within the walls of the Oriental building constitutes one of the most gorgeous displays of Far Eastern art and manufactured articles ever shipped from the Orient, and is bewildering in beauty and extent. Not a country of Asia is without representation, and treasures of old and modern art, never before permitted to leave the lands in which they were created, will be seen for the first time in the land of the Occident. The matter of arrangement of the Oriental exhibit has been placed in the hands of the most competent and artistic men at command and its display will be worthy of the magnificent collection.

About the Oriental building are gathered the great buildings housing the United States exhibit and the Alaska, Hawaiian and Philippine displays. One of the largest bandstands is within close distance, and from its doors the most noted musical organizations of the world will be heard daily.

EVENTS IN OUR STATE OF MINOR IMPORTANCE

Portland—A verdict finding that the O. R. & N. Company had violated the 28-hour stock law was returned by a jury in the federal court.

Pendleton—E. L. Swartzlander, formerly of the Klamath Indian agency, will be the new agent at the Umatilla Indian agency.

Dufur—A strawberry plant bearing 800 well developed berries, is thought to be the record, yet in the field of Mike Abbot, not far from this place, such a plant flourishes.

Oregon City—Oscar Eaton, for many years chaplain of the Oregon State Grange, died at 6 o'clock Saturday morning at his home near Oswego, aged 88 years.

Marshfield—It is reported that the body of the late R. D. Hume, which is buried at Wedderburn, on the Rogue river, in Curry county, is to be moved to San Francisco.

Roseburg—State Fish Warden McAllister, of Portland, accompanied by a deputy, arrived in the city Friday afternoon and late the same evening went to Winchester, where he confiscated 11 fish nets, all stationed near the dam.

Eugene—Charles Knop, a farmer living a few miles west of town, was arrested on the charge of making and selling prune brandy. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $200.

Albany—The ninth annual convention of the Oregon State Teachers' Association—the western division—will meet in this city June 29, 30 and July 1 and 2.

Salem—The woodshippers of Kamela, Or., have asked the railroad commission to use its influence to secure a reduction in the $3 freight rate on wood from that point to Boise, Idaho.

Astoria—The salmon are still running slow and the pack is said to be considerably below the normal. Unless there is a material change for the better the season's pack is likely to be a comparatively poor one.

Philomath—The 56th session of the annual conference of the United Brethren church closed Sunday, having been in session since June 8. The next session will convene in Philomath in connection with the annual camping in June, 1910.

Portland—The committee having charge of the Northern Baptist Convention, to be held in Portland from June 25 to July 2, is making preparations for the entertainment of 1500 delegates, who will represent all the leading Baptist churches of the United States.

Pendleton—Believing that with an independent electric railroad extending across the wheat belt of Umatilla county and connecting with the boats on the Upper Columbia river they would be able to sell their wheat to better advantage, the farmers of the county are again talking of building the proposed line.

Roseburg—Unless the Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph Company moves its poles on the streets to be paved, men will be employed by the city council to chop them down, such procedure having been agreed upon by street committee.

Pendleton—Through activity of Umatilla county officials, James McCall, alias Harry McConnell, and James Brad
