They Didn't Have to Change.

During the year in which our pure food laws have been put into effect there has been a great hurrying and scurrying on the part of the food manufacturers to change their methods to make them conform to the law.

The Quaker Oats Company is a conspicuous exception. It was admitted that Quaker Oats was as pure and clean as possible and that it was an ideal food.

It is so cheap that any one can afford it and so nourishing that everyone needs it. The result of last year's experiments at Yale and other points where food values were tested is that Quaker Oats has been adopted by many persons as their food on which they rely for adding vigor and endurance of muscle and brain.

The Quaker Oats Company meets all demands in the way it packs Quaker Oats; regular size packages and the large size family package; the latter both with and without china.

The railroad situation in Eastern Oregon is gradually clearing. Like a game of chess or checkers, one move necessitates another, until the opportune moment when one sweep cleans the board and every thing then moves with celerity. The two giant systems, that of Hill and that of the late Harriman, are still battling for the mastery in the Des Chutes canyon, as far south as Madras surveying parties and men in advance are scouring the country with the view of locating the easiest ground for construction work.
