

NAME YOUR FARM

Throughout the United States there are many farms that are not named, and the Courier believes that it is just as important that the farms should be named as it is important that the various business houses are named.

SHORT STORIES

compiled by The "MAN ABOUT TOWN"

I never crowd too many into one house; six square feet of floor space for each bird is about right. I have found double board floors, up off the ground, the best. I keep plenty of grain on the floor and throw the grain in this so they must work to find it.

Most breed of promise suits are based on extensive experience and not on a single or a married woman. Kid gloves and a walking stick are useless to a man driving an ox team.

My son, follow not in the footsteps of the lover, and make no example of him who is born tired, for, verily, I say unto you, his business is overstocked. The seats on the corner are all taken, and the waiting places are all occupied. It is better to saw wood at two bits a cord than whittle at a whitening match and abuse the government. My son, whilst thou hast thy skull and the sense of a Jay bird, break away from the cigarette habit, for, lo, thy breath stinks like a glue factory, and thy mind is less intelligent than a store dummy. You, thou art a cipher with the rim knocked off.—Milwaukee News

Ignato, an Italian gardener, was sauntering along the bicycle path in the Milwaukee cemetery early Sunday morning, at peace with himself and the rest of the world. Dame fortune had treated him kindly in his residence in the United States, and he had a right to be proud of his new country, so to show his gratitude, he started to whistle. "The Star Spangled Banner." We started; for barely had he finished the first bar. "Oh say, can you see"—then he did see by the dawn's early light an apparition arising from a newly made grave. Ignato did not wait to know the second time to be sure of it, but giving voice to a shriek loud enough to cause Garibaldi to turn over in his tomb, he wheeled around, vaulted over the fence, and "beat it," not stopping till he had crossed the line into another country, to the comfort of the Italian, a farmer named Thomas Neal, a grave digger, who had started to work early Sunday morning to prepare a grave for a funeral. When about ten feet down, he struck a fender, and was just lifting this out when he was discovered by the foreigner with the above result.

"Pears to me," said the man who knows everything, "that you answer Cooper fellows would run a 'Why Don't They' column in your paper." The rouser began to move uneasily, but finally mustered up sufficient sand to ask just what his learned acquaintance meant.

"Oh, there's all kinds of subjects," was the answer. "For instance, why don't they send another expedition to the pole and settle all of this blasted maslin masticating for keeps? Why don't the men who howl the loudest about patronizing home merchants patronize the home merchants instead of coming to Portland for the greater part of their wants? Why don't the women of this and every other city wear a trills shorter skirt instead of coming from-further down the street, gathering up the cosmopolitan gobs for the kids at home? Why—" But here the rouser was forced to beat a hasty retreat. Since the time the first newspaper was published, editors and writers have been greatly helped by the suggestions, criticisms, but never praise, that has been passed out by the man who knows everything.
