Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

SOMETHING AT SHIVELEY'S.

Friday Night is the Date and the hour at 8:15.

Friday night, in Shiveley's opera house, Col. Robt. Miller, of Portland, is going to give a political address, not on single tax, trusts, abolishing of capital punishment or who you should elect president of this disturbed old country.

He's just going to tell you your wife, mother or sister should have as much American rights as a drunken bum, an idiot, a degenerate or a plug ugly.

Women are going to be given the right to vote for this one great reason: That it IS their right and they are only prevented by right of might now. You know that a skirts is not a constitutional bar to having a voice in government, and you know there is no sound argument in this big country for disfranchising them and putting them in a class with Chinamen, Indians and criminals.

Like all reforms this of woman's right comes slow, but it's sure coming.

It's her right in Washington, in California, in Idaho, and it's going to be her right in Oregon. And the sooner the better—the better for Oregon, and the worse for the unfit public official.

You men, come out Friday night and hear Col. Miller. He doesn't want all women there. He wants you fellows who have brains and who will play fair if convinced.

Come out and give him a chance to convince you. Come out and listen to a talk that will make you feel proud of your wife, mother, sister or sweetheart, and a talk that will make you go to the ballot box with an X for woman's right to a voice in a country that she rears the men for.

A LAUGHABLE ERROR.

Prisoner Said "GUILTY" Grand Jury Said "Not."

Here's a story that was told around the court house this week, one of those laughable legal accidents that puts justice in the Vandeville class for a few minutes.

The story goes that a man was before the grand jury on some deal with a squaw, and had been jail many weeks. In considering the case the grand jury found there was no Oregon statute to cover it, no law violated, hence they found "not" a true bill. This case was reported with three others, where true bills had been found, but the word "not" was accidentally committed in the reading of it, making it an indictment of the prisoner.

Therefore when he came before the judge for a plea, he agreed with the report as read, and pleaded "guilty."

When the documents went down to clerk Mufvey the error was noted, and well, they say there was some fun.

The prisoner had said he WAS guilty; the grand jury had said he was NOT, so all he had to do was run along.

Olds Wins Suit.

In Circuit Court Tuesday Judge Campbell rendered a decision in favor of E. D. Olds of Oak Grove, for the possession of a spring in front of his property. Olds started to dig a well in his yard when H. C. Krum, V. L. Clark and A. L. Thompson, who lived across the road from Mr. Olds objected to it, claiming it would ruin the spring. The spring was leased to the county by Olds. Judge Campbell held that the spring belonged to Olds and the county had no right to lease it to others. Cross & Hammond represented Olds.

Rushing the Business.

The following story is told of a one time Pennsylvania legislator:

The session was about to expire. In accordance with the usual custom, the chair was occupied by a rapid worker, who was deaf to objections and blind to objectors. His name was Alexander McClure. Under his able management the bills were going through at a lightning express rate when one measure was reached that was particularly obnoxious to a noisy minority. Utterly oblivious to the demonstration, Mr. McClure declared that the bill had passed. Over in one corner of the legislative chamber one member was especially vociferous. He would not be quieted, and Mr. McClure was finally compelled to notice him for the sake of peace.

"For what purpose does the gentleman rise?" asked the chair.

"I want to offer an amendment to the bill," was the reply.

"Too late," said Mr. McClure without a smile. "Offer it to the next bill. The clerk will read."
