

Western Dairies Growing.

The Outlook for the dairy industry in the Pacific Northwest is much to the good, reports the Western Stock Journal, published at Oregon City. Reports from many sections of the five coast states indicate an upward movement for the industry and we predict that within the next twelve months several thousand dairy cows will be added to the service on the coast.

Additional butter, creamery and cheese establishments must necessarily spring up, and these in turn will create a still greater demand for dairy cows.

In every increase noted of an increase in the dairy herd, the tendency has been toward the pure blood animal, and this largely through the continued efforts of the agricultural schools and better class publications. To build substantially from the best foundation stock, seems to have obtained a foothold in the Pacific Northwest.
