HANDLING GASOLINE.

Method Employed in France to Prevent Explosions.

Places where inflammable liquids are stored are classed by the French government with establishments which must conform to the most severe rules. In order to satisfy conditions imposed by the prefecture of police, a new apparatus invented by Marfui and Huneke was adopted. This apparatus includes no complicated mechanism. It is automatic in its operation and independent of the workmen.

Throughout the apparatus in which the fuel is stored or handled air is replaced by carbonic acid gas. This gas not only serves as a protecting agent, but its pressure determines the movement of the liquid. Furthermore, the gas fills all the pipes and valves and acts in such a way that liquid can circulate only when the system is absolutely free of leaks. For instance, if a leak occurs at any point in the system the pressure of the gas will disappear and the liquid will remain in the reservoir, where there is no danger of explosion, since air is necessary to the formation of an explosive mixture. In fact, all danger which comes from external fire or even from sparks within the tank
