RESUME OF WORK OF LEGISLATURE

Session of 1913 Places 377 Laws on Statute Books

THIRTY VETOES OVERRIDDEN

Workmen's Compensation - Good Roads Laws-Agricultural Extension Work-Widows' Pensions-Minimum Wage for Women and Minors-Survey of State Resources -Investigation of Cellio Power Pro-

Salem.-The labors of the legislative assembly of 1913 have added 377 new laws to the Oregon codes. Of the new laws 10 are due to the passage of bills of the 1911 session and 30 of the recent session over the veto of the governor, including the general appropriation bill, while 337 were either aproved by the governor or filed without his signature.

Three features marked the final session of the legislative assembly prior to sine die adjournment. One was the ease with which bills were passed over the veto whenever desired; another the consideration of vetoed measures on their merits, and the third the speed shown in the transaction of business.

Unquestionably many of the measures passed were of first importance, the list including the workmen's compensation act, good roads legislation, agricultural college extension work bill, the minimum wage measure for women and minors, the widows' pension bill, laws affecting judicial procedure and the apropriations for the Panama-Pacific Exposition, the Columbia Southern irrigation project, detail survey of state resources and investigation of water power at Celilo.

Bill Opening Rogue River Passed Abbott's printing measure was decisively defeated, but the bill opening Rogue river passed easily.

The bill abolishing the office of State Printing Expert Harris was not sent to the governor after temporary adjournment.

Just before final adjournment, when the bill finally reached West he vetoed it, making no report of the veto until after the legislature had adjourn-

As regards bills increasing salaries in counties, one argument sufficed to cause passage over the vetoes—that in every case the amounts to which such salaries were raised were less than the ones given in the Gill bill, the pas sage of which the governor said in every veto message would make such increases unnecessary.

A Few Measures Killed

A few measures were killed, the vetoe being sustained, by request of the authors, because of amendments which made them worthless. Farrell, for instance, asked that the Morals Court bill veto be sustained; Joseph the recall amendment; Latourette, the superior court measure, and Carson the bill relating to judgments and de crees. The arguments against the Day bill to investigate Cellio water resources were nullified by the showing that the state engineer had recommended an appropriation of $50,000 and the governor one of $25,000, while this measure called for only $15,000.

In relation to appropriations, when the standing appropriations of more than $1,200,000 are deducted from the approximately $6,000,000 appropriation the total amount of drainage from the state treasury is reduced to a figure more nearly commensurate with the growth of the state and its institutions. There were also certain unusual features calling for large appropri ations. It should be borne in mind also, that the legislators did not pile up the expenses of the taxpayers appreciably by extending the session beyoud regular 40-day limit, as they draw no salary for the additional perlod worked and had to pay their own expenses.

Women Important Factor

The part played by women at this legislative session was remarkable. That the lawmakers have taken them into consideration as a political factor is shown by the consideration displayed in the case of measures peculiarly affecting their inferests. At the 1911 session such bills as now have become laws were thrown into the scrap heap without compunction.

As a rule the investigations" made by the legislature were perfunctory. Relative to killing bad bills, two are worthy of special mention-one which would have created a plumbers' trust, and another which would have created an electricians' trust. With very few exceptions the record of this legislature as to so-called "hold-up measures" is excellent.

The following is a list of the important messures which will become
