And the state superme court decided that the bondsmen must pay the $1,000 to the city of Woodburn. This may be interesting to Oregon City. The bonds a saloon gives are one of the conditions for granting a license. When they are violated, should not the bondsmen be holding? If not, why are they given? If so, why doesn't Oregon City demand the bondsmen be holding? Memonally of the case not what the people desirble the case not matters

The county court system does not satisfy. It is a rule of a trio. It is not representative. It takes a way from the people their right to run their own affairs. Voters are protesting. WHY?

Whether it is fashionable to save money or not, it is sensible. "Spend and have a good time" is a popular slogan, but if you believe in it and practice it too strongly, you will never be rated high in the credit books. The men and women who keep their extra cash in the bank until profitable investment opportunity arises, may have to forego some of the luxuries of their neighbors who make away with their entire income, but a few years will put a financial difference between them that no effort can bridge over.
