There were over 300 men present at Saturday's mass meeting, and we want to ask any man who attended that meeting, be he friend or foe of the county court, if the following, taken from the Morning Enterprise, is true? Is there one man present who will say it is true? Will Mr. Eby himself say it is true?

In speaking of the opening of the meeting and of what the Enterprise terms "unexpected developments" that paper says:

Mr. Eby endeavored to obtain the floor to state that the Live Wires' committee would submit its own report, being unable to endorse the report of the three men of the ruling faction, but cat-calls, yells and abuse made it unable for him to speak. Shortly after this he left the hall and the remaining faction ran matters as suited themselves. After they had presented their report, which was done by Mr. Schuebel, Mr. Brown withdrawing from the center of the stage temporarily, two resolutions were introduced and ad-

Would Bring Sportsmen From Every State in Union Here

Dozens of letters, telephone calls and personal commendations have come to the Courier office for the article last week on the closing of the Willamette.

Any number of people have called for and written for papers of this issue to send out as marked copies.

On the editorial page of the Oregonian Monday was a vigorous letter along this line, written by Thomas Farrell of Portland, a salmon canner who urges protection for the royal chinook in the Willamette, and Tuesday one of the officials of the Telegram came to the Courier, strongly gram came to the Courier, strongly commended the action of the Courier and who said if the people and papers would agitate this matter it would be easy and inexpensive to put it to a vote of the people at the next election.

That it would carry and would carry by an overwhelming majority, is but a question of the opportunity.

Most any man has a little sportsman's blood in him, and while he may never throw a line or shoulder a gun yet he will fight to protect our game and will read a sporting story or look at motion pictures of the rod or gun with all the enjoyment of the schol-

Back in New York state there are some splendid trout streams, where the big speckled beauties grow to the game laws are rigid. Only by angling can fish be taken, only a limited number can be caught, and the open season is short. Game protectors almost patrol these streams, and no mercy is shown to the law violator. The people of that section know the advertising and commercial value of those fishing preserves. If a fisherman used a net, spear or dynamite he would be sent to jail for the limit and the chances are he would be tarred and feathered before he got there.

And almost every state protects its game fish as it does its birds and game animals. But here in Oregon, here in Clackamas river, where the falls hold back countless thousands of the gamiest fish that ever swam, and makes the lower river the best fishing stream in North America-here the laws permit nets to simply haul out the fish by the ton and sell them wholesale to the canneries. The law might just as well tell the fishermen the river was open to dynamite. With the falls stopping escape at one end, and nets running ens the river, it is simply matter of hoisting them out. Close this stream to all means but the hook and line, advertise such ac-
