

The Dirt-Proof Watch

No watch can keep good time once the dirt gets into the works. Dirt will creep under the edges of the lids, when the lids are attached by joints.

A clever man found the remedy. He attached the lids to the case by screwing them on. Each thread of the screw presents a new obstacle to the dirt and it is practically impossible for the dirt to pass all these numerous bars.

The "Screw Bezel" case commends itself to all practical men, because there's a real reason behind it. And it costs less than the same grade of ordinary cases.

We show these dirt-proof cases in large variety—Nickel, Silver and Gold Filled. Stop in and see our stock of Waltham, Elgin, Howard, Hamilton and Southbend Watches.

Taylor, also a graduate of the Oregon Agricultural College, is foreman of the machine shops at Dunsmuir.

Mrs. Marie Tscharnig, one of the well known and highly respected residents of Oregon City, died at the Oregon City Hospital on Friday evening at 6 o'clock, after a brief illness. Mrs. Tscharnig was enjoying the best of health until about a week ago when she was stricken with paralysis. She was removed from her home on Sixth and Main Street to the hospital a few days before her death.

Mrs. Tscharnig was born in Halstadt, Austria, July 22, 1837. Her maiden name was Marie Zauner. She was married twice, her first husband being Jacob Fischer, who died in Germany many years ago. She afterwards was united in marriage to Casper Tscharnig, who died in this city seven years ago this July. Mrs. Tscharnig left Germany for America in 1867, and arrived in Oregon City two years later, where she has since resided.

Deceased is survived by three children, Julius Fischer, of Portland; Mrs. Julia Hartke, of Oregon City; Alexander Tscharnig, of Portland. She is also survived by 10 grandchildren.

The funeral services were held from the St. Paul's Episcopal church, of which Mrs. Tscharnig was a member, on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. T. F. Bowen, of Portland, formerly of this city, officiating. Many friends of the family attended. The remains were interred in the family lot in Mountain View cemetery.

ODE TO MORNING.
Let the gray creep softly, white-ly!
Let the dawn spread quickly, brightly!
Mellw globules swell and break
Orange in a silver lake,
Mellow, yellow, pale and fallow,
Swoon to mountain, gulfed in hollow,
Grained with garnet, glossed with glory,
Warmly crimson, chilled and honry,
Elfs of light within, without,
Thread the fleecy ways about,
Snowy floods around them rise
From the breasts of paradise,
Seething, churning, wildly turning,
Greatly shading, madly burning,
Till a beam doth pause, doth quiver,
Poised that breadth of lake and river,
And with dartle, strength and warning
Shoots the radiant gulf of morning!

SATURDAY NIGHT SERMONS BY REV. SAMUEL W. PURVIS, D.D.

THE DRAFTED CROSS BEARER.
Text, "And they compel one Simon to bear his cross."—Mark xv, 21.

This incident is one of the little touches of the crucifixion that are easily overlooked. The tide of events is rushing us toward Golgotha and carries us with it. Our minds, like the feet of the excited crowd, hurry us on to the final issue. It is only when all is over, when the shouting and the tumult dies, that we remember details. Now we recall the stranger, Simon. He's mentioned in three gospels. Not a follower of Jesus yet, but in all probability a disciple afterward. There were hosts of Jews in Egypt ever since Alexander gave them commercial privileges. There was a synagogue of the Cyrenians in Jerusalem. Simon is a well dressed stranger among the great holiday passover week throngs in the Holy City. He is now at leisure to see the sights. There is a mob howling down one of the narrow streets on its way to see an execution. Simon is curious to see the crowd. Curiosity is not feminine; it is human. The victim is the Nazarene on his way to crucifixion. Men to be executed have the additional horror and humiliation of carrying their own cross. It is an added indignity, like making a traitor dig his own grave. He is a Carpenter, strong and brawny, used to carrying beams of wood, but he has undergone the agony of Gethsemane. The brutality of the judgment hall, the whippings and scourings, the loss of blood and the loss of sleep have left him sick, faint. Then he falters and falls. He is kicked or lashed; he rises and then stumbles again.

"S. P. Q. R!"
Some one else will have to carry the gibbet. They glance about for one of his disciples. There's none near. I'm afraid! Oh, well, any back will do. Here's this clean, well dressed stranger gaping on. "In the name of the senate and Roman people I command thee to bear this cross!" One moment more to the spectator; the next a soldier's heavy hand is on his shoulder and that accursed thing on his back. The sun is hot. The crowd jeers. Might as well plead with wild beasts as the soldiers. "They compelled him." It was hateful business, but do it he must, with many a black look and muttered imprecation. It is a mighty trying experience for the Cyrenian. Nothing further from his purpose. It's thrillingly startling. Here out of the quietness of his life he is seized violently and becomes a central figure in the world's greatest tragedy. What happened to this spectator, on whose flinching shoulders, bewildered mind and rebellious spirit was put the cross, the load of another, is precisely the lot and life of many a man and woman whose eyes are now resting on this page. Upon them have been forced unexpected, unwelcome events. On our unwilling, unseeking shoulders is

When a long we must carry to the end of our days.

Some One Else's Cross.
It happens so simply. You stand by the wayside of your life some bright, fresh morning, light hearted and care free. Suddenly some one starts out from the crowd. You've hardly time to know what it is all about. No questions asked; restless hands are on you. It seems like a fearful dream. You can't get away. It is horrible and unjust. You didn't want it nor deserve it. Somebody was lax in business and left you hopelessly in debt. Somebody's unscrupulous ambition or laziness or plain vice piles up on you loads of obligation. Somebody else's sickness, misery or misfortune leaves you heir to their troubles. Somebody's thoughtlessness, vanity or stubbornness darkens the rest of your days. A good part of the load of life we find ourselves carrying. It is not due to ourselves, was not chosen by ourselves. Simon had not merited his grievous burden. He did not create it, did not choose it. In a moment he found himself carrying it. And your cross, my friend, is often hewn out of the sins and weaknesses of others and thrust upon you.

Bearing Your Cross.
How are you going to bear your "cross"? How are you going to carry the burden of a life-long Calvary? Here some day to give the soldiers the slip or even getting rid of it. Do you spend a good bit of your time trying to get rid of the unwelcome burden? As a sensitive child you were tormented or ridiculed. You wanted an education or to start in business. But your father took sick or somebody was a fool or a rogue and frittered away what belonged to you. Some family sin or blunder overshadowed you. From that day you have to play the obligate part; the singer gets the applause. At night when you are awake and cannot sleep the gross injustice of it all comes back. It rankles. You are in danger of becoming embittered and cynical. But don't. Listen. We sometimes curse men when we ought to be believing in God. The day came when Simon became a Christian and thanked God for the privilege of bearing his Lord's cross. He had two boys, Alexander and Milton. They, too, became Christians. They, too, became fathers. They, too, had their crosses. Carry your cross bravely, now. Some day you and yours may glory in it.

Crushed.
Alas—I hope. Miss Grotz—may I hope that is, is there any hope that I may— Helpless—While there's life there's hope, but— Alas—Yes, yes, go on! Helpless—While there's life there's hope, but—but you're a dead one!—Pack

In whatever sphere his duty lies every man must rely on himself. Others can help us, but we must make ourselves.—Sir John Lubbock.

For those who seek relief from kidney backache, weak kidneys, bladder rills, Doan's Kidney Pills offer hope of relief and the proof is here in Oregon City the same as everywhere. Oregon City people have used Doan's and Oregon City people recommend Doan's, the kidney remedy used in America for fifty years. Why suffer? Why run the risk of dangerous kidney ills—fatal brights disease. Here's Oregon City proof. Investigate it. Edwin Albee, Washington and 17th Streets, Oregon City, Oregon says: "For five or six years I suffered with kidney trouble. There was pain in the small of my back and twinges from stooping or lifting. I tired easily. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and I had to get up two or three times during the night. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they helped me greatly. For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

If seven doctors had told you, as they had told C. E. Blanchard, of Lo Grange, Calif., that you had but a short time to live on account of kidney trouble, what would you do? He says: "I took Foley Kidney Pills and they completely cured me and I can not speak too highly of them." Cost less than the doctors, but accomplish more. Huntley Bros. Co.
