OREGON CITY, OREGON

THE WATER SITUATION.

An Unbiased Statement of the Matter as it Stands Today.

The council committee on pure water appointed some months ago are putting forth persistent effort to obtain a source of pure water supply for this city at the earliest possible date.

There are three lines along which work has been carried on. (1) After many meetings with the representative and attorney for the backers of the Lee franchise, the main provisions have been decided on and the franchise practically completed. (2) The committee has been in conference with the Portland Commission, who declared a few days ago that nothing could be promised in regard to Bull Run water before the measuring of capacity of mains should be completed. But the commission in charge of this department under the new city government promised this should be done within ten days when a definite answer would be given whether Oregon City could obtain water from this source and under what terms. (3) A third is in wells in or very near vicinity. The story of the effort to obtain water on the Ladd tract at Mt. Pleasant and the failure there has been often repeated. The next effort was boring two wells on the Englebright tract just outside the city limits. The first was driven to a depth of about 50 feet when water was found in large quantities clear and cold. The amount was estimated at approximately 500 gallons a minute. Without "liners" it produced approximately 200 gallons a minute.

The committee believing it would be more satisfactory to the public decided to go deeper and the work was continued to a depth of 148 feet, having passed through clay loam, sand-loam, fine sand and then a stratum of water bearing gravel at approximately the 50 foot depth, then the blue clay, reddish shale and genuine red shale. The general history of these latter formations in this order is, in the Willamette Valley no more water; so it was decided to give up this well, and return to the water bearing stratum and pump and test for purity and quantity. On pulling the pipe on the return however, an accident happened which made it less expensive to drive a new well close beside the former than to proceed with this one. Mr. Scott, the contractor, then drove this last well to a depth of over 50 feet and the water was tested and found free from colon bacilli, or disease germs, palatable, of great quantity and of a temperature of only 52 degrees.

Other tests are now under way and results from time to time be given as they are received from the state department of health and from other eminent bacteriologists and chemists. It has not been and is not now the purpose of the committee to try to insist upon any one of these sources being substituted for the present or for any other source of supply. It has been and is now the determination of the committee to, if possible, obtain all helpful information to be had on these sources and to determine the absolute purity and sufficient quantity of water and then to furnish this information and ask that the citizens be permitted to vote and thus say what they want.

Unfortunately there has developed from the first, opposition to the efforts of the committee and this opposition has taken on the aspect of personal abuse and misrepresentation. Two of the councilmen, for reasons best known to themselves, even attempted to hold up an ordinance appropriating $350 for this work, after they had stayed away from the specially appointed meeting for this purpose, when this ordinance passed its first reading unanimously, five members being present and voting. In spite of their personal attacks upon the committee and other members of the council, who favored the present investigation, $350 was voted with only the two negatives, to pay for this effort save from suffering and loss of human life.

However it appears the committee are not discouraged in the effort put forth and are going on with the investigation and leave the results with the people as a whole to decide in time to meet the dangerous conditions of the fall season.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

WASHINGTON.

It is a magic name, that of the nation's founder, who is becoming, in turn, the father of the republican era in other lands.
It is fitting that this spotless name should grace the capital city of the greatest of republics, for it is a continual suggestion of the character that republic should take.
It is said by competent authorities that when present plans have been carried out Washington will be the most beautiful city in the world.
Even now it is beautiful, a city of parks and broad streets, of pleasant homes and public buildings worthy of a great nation.
The phoenix may have risen from its ashes, but Washington literally arose from a swamp.
Yet its growth in a century, to an ideal capital is no more of a miracle than that of the nation about it, which has sprung up in the same time from Washington monument.

In vision one can see the heights about the city crowned with beautiful homes. Already these are beginning to appear.
As the republic advances in wealth, culture and art it is not difficult to imagine Washington becoming a second Athens or Rome, a center of poetry and learning, an intellectual as well as a political and social capital.
An American can take a greater pride in his country after looking upon her capital city.

Oregon will be set in motion all over the world as a result of a visit to the state by Ralph R. Earle, representative of the Pathé picture record of events which is seen each week in picture houses throughout the United States and European countries by more than 20,000,000 people.
It was with the cooperation of Louis W. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern railway and William Hanley, of Burns, Oregon, that the motion picture man was enabled to secure some very remarkable views of Central Oregon agricultural and industrial scenes.
Making the trip into Bend over the Oregon Trunk railroad, the Hill line that has opened up the great Central Oregon country, the motion picture man was taken to Burns, in Harney county, by automobile a distance of 150 miles. For a week the Pathé representative toured Harney county covering more than 1,000 miles by automobile to secure films that will show to the world the openings for homeseekers on the free government lands of Oregon.

While a visitor on the Double O ranch, owned by Hanley, more than 2,000 head of cattle were rounded up for the pictures. Motion picture panoramas will show the extent of the great valleys of Central Oregon and the Blitzen canal, just completed by Hanley through the Blitzen valley. This big irrigation ditch, formed by the waters of the Blitzen river, drains more than 100,000 acres of land and is forty miles long. The pictures will show the hog and sheep industry, homeseekers coming into the country, the sage brush land before and after the arrival of the homeseeker and generally give a truthful picture of the opportunities and possibilities of Central Oregon.

Louis W. Hill is one of the foremost of Northwest developers and believes in the motion picture to give wide-spread publicity to what Oregon has to offer to newcomers.
The Pathé people have also secured a reel showing the scenery of the Deschutes canyon where the Hill lines expended an enormous sum of money to build the Oregon Trunk railroad into the Central part of the state. The pictures secured by the Pathé people are the first of the kind ever taken in Oregon and will be shown in the leading motion picture theaters all over the world.
