Official Paper for the Farmers Society of Equity of Clackamas Co M. J. BROWN, EDITOR

Affidavit of Circulation

I, M. J. Brown, being duly sworn, say that I am editor and part owner of the Oregon City Courier, and that the average weekly circulation of that paper from May 1, 1912, to May 1, 1913, has exceeded 2,000 copies, and that these papers have been printed and circulated from the Courier office in the usual manner.

M. J. BROWN. Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of May, 1913. GILBERT L. HEDGES, Notary Public for Oregon

RECALLED

It is a hard word to be applied to Judge Beattie and Commissioner Blair or any public official but the Courier can say for these two officials they were not the only ones recalled.

When the bulletins flashed out the recall of the county officials Saturday night, it likewise announced the defeat of the "county ring"—it ticked off the count for George C. Brownell, Joseph E. Hedges and O. D. Eby as political factors in Clackamas county, and it showed some others clinging to the ropes when the gong sounded.

For the first time in the history of Oregon, county officials have been recalled and have stepped down and out and Clackamas county has again blazed the trail. The result of this election will have a state wide interest and influence.

It was an uprising of the people—a protest against conditions. It was a declaration that there must be more responsive, more representative, more economical government in this county. It was the voice of the people expressed outside of party or political bounds. It was a demand that party pull, favors and patronage, give place to out and out needed, honest management, and that "ring" control and dictation will be no longer tolerated in Clackamas county.

The people placed faith in H. S. Anderson and J. W. Smith to improve the present conditions in this county. They have been elected by a decisive majority—by votes that can't be explained away.

These men are going to do their utmost to lower expenses and get permanent results for Clackamas county. They are men of unquestioned honesty and ability. They know the smarts of taxation and the sore spots of the taxpayers. They know why they were elected, and the Courier knows they are going to make good.

Saturday's verdict was a splendid result of men and women standing by, and this paper is proud of their splendid support. Especially is this true of the farmers and farmers' wives of this county, of precincts which stood almost unanimously for the recall, and which far offset the work and influence of the politicians and office holders in the cities and towns along the railways.

What the leaders of the recall have had to go up against only those on the inside of the executive work know. With limited means, without any "machine," without organization, they have been able to overcome the circumstances, these men have been harassed, worried, worn out. But they had faith in the voters of this county, and they worked hard; they had their hearts in their work—and they won. It does little good now to review what they had to overcome. The election is past and the victory is won.

And the only thing is to let wounds heal and all help to better conditions.

THE CHANCES

When a hog, a dog, a horse, a cat dies anywhere near the Willamette river for a hundred miles north of us, it is dumped into the convenient river. And Oregon City drinks them as they rot and dissolve.

The disease germs and filth from the hospitals, the water closets, the barnyards, the saloons, millions of dead eels and the wash from the whole great valley come down here and we drink it.

They say filtering and chemicals take out typhoid germs. We doubt it, but if it were true, do you want to drink it? Will it not breed unhealthy, boils, smallpox and sores?

Do you want to take the chances?

Wonder if the Enterprise still thinks the recall movement is abortive?

They "let George do it"—and he did.

Bank Friendship

Some say it is all a matter of business, but we have learned it is entirely possible for a real friendship to exist between the bank and its customers. Indeed, we have a long list of customers whose fast friendship we do not doubt, and whose fast friends we are. We are ready to do our part.

The Bank of Oregon City

OLDEST BANK IN CLACKAMAS COUNTY

WHINING

As a publication devoted to the advancement of the interests of Clackamas county, this paper greets the incoming officials with an open hand and an unprejudiced mind. It has never, throughout the campaign, said anything that would in any way reflect upon either of the incoming officials, and as far as this paper is aware the incoming judge is an upright man, who will do the best that he can in the position into which he is stepping.—The Enterprise.

Beautiful! So touching! So generous! A few weeks ago the Courier stated that should the recall succeed the Enterprise would come up and beg to eat out of the hands of those who it had done its feeble best to discredit and denigrate.

But we hardly expected it before the victory reports were all in. "It has never said a word that would in any way reflect upon either of the incoming officials."

Lazarus, begging for the crumbs, would have laughed at this! In the election story of the same paper in which the above whine was printed was this contemptible dig:

A peculiar feature of the election is that the newly elected commissioner is at present under indictment by the grand jury for selling intoxicating liquor on Sunday.

And last week it had a vicious cartoon, showing Judge Anderson and Commissioner Smith in humiliating caricatures, standing on a breaking platform.

It was absolutely unfair and dishonest policy all through the campaign; its dirty work; its lying reports to the Oregonian and Telegram—so raw that the Equity society and the business men and professional men of Oregon City took it up and protested to the Portland papers.

In the face of all this the Enterprise comes whining like a slavering dog at a closed door, begging to be let in.

Yes, the Enterprise greets the incoming officials with an open hand. The "open hand" is its way of running a newspaper.

It was the "open hand" county ring the indignant voters buried Saturday. But some men don't know when they are dead. By force of long habit the hand stays open—the death rattle holds it open.

If George C. Brownell still despises the backers of the recall he will have to sit up nights and work Sundays to get to them all.

The fellow who explains how it all happened by the light vote would not hold a job long in proportion figuring. A heavier vote would simply have meant greater defeat.

When the Enterprise proclaimed in full headlines that three-fourths of the ladies of the city had announced they would support Judge Beattie, it dropped a stick of dynamite. Saturday it exploded.

Harry Thaw, who has been confined in Mattawan insane asylum for seven years, has escaped and gotten out of the state. Thaw is not insane, never was. He committed murder and his money made him a lunatic—it saved him from being electrocuted.

George C. Brownell condemned the just-before-election indictments and the corporation talks of Joseph E. Hedges as monumental blunders. Yet this political Solomon stood up before an audience of thinking men and women, told them the Courier editor was a cross between a Dago and a Spaniard, and thought he had made votes. George, in his dotage has something to learn yet.

"Every president and every cabinet officer leave Washington for a few weeks during the heated term. One goes to Oyster Bay, another to Berkeley, another to Cornish, another to Yellowstone Park, another to the seashore. Mr. Bryan goes to the Chattanooga platform. It is his recreation. It is no discredit to him that he finds vast audiences eager to pay to hear his inspiring oratory. His lectures are not partisan. He is a great preacher. Every man and woman, boy or girl, who hears him is the better for it. He is entitled to spend his vacation time as best suits him. He will not neglect the duties of his important office for any personal advantage."—Robert La Follette.

DEBITS AND CREDITS

Every fellow can tell "just how it happened" and our guess is as good as any. Eliminating entirely the charges, the men who stamped the county for the county court did more harm than good. George C. Brownell can't realize that his flowery talk and his 1492 "con" have worn out in Clackamas county, and J. E. Hedges' corporation excuses, explanations and defenses were decidedly antagonistic to the people. Had both kept entirely out of the campaign there would have been less irritation.

Convening the grand jury just before election and indicting Commissioner Smith and M. J. Brown was a big mistake. That the indictment of Smith would catch the women vote and Brown's indictment would discredit the Courier was a weak estimate of public sentiment. It was ill-timed and ill-advised. It was old school rough-neck politics. It doesn't go now.

Another big drawback was the Enterprise's policy of support. It made votes for the recall. A preacher once said there were two ways of making converts, by love of Christ and fear of hell. The Enterprise policy was neither appeal or scare. It was an irritant. The defense was weak from the start. It was poorly handled.

As to the credits, the men who got out and fought when the betting was 4 to 1 on the county court—there are many men, too many to give individual credit. The Courier could have done little without the backing of these men a man and woman, who you all know who they are. And not only the speakers but the missionaries, the fellows who touched elbows, who didn't speak in public, but who worked in private, and whose work counted.

Of Oregon City three men made many votes for the recall in public speeches, George L. Story, Paul E. Fischer and Harvey E. Cross. Mr. Story fired hot shots into the county ring and kept the opposition jumping sideways during the entire campaign.

The big slump in the city vote can be largely attributed to the speeches of Henry Spiess and H. E. Cross on election eve, and the heart to heart talks of individual workers. Their talks from the auto on Main street made many votes for the recall and made many a man and woman, who would have voted for Beattie and Blair refuse to vote at all. Mr. Spiess' talk showed up the inside workings of the ring that controlled health conditions and Mr. Cross showed up the combine that controlled the county court and he laid bare conditions that voters could not sustain.

Not a newspaper in Clackamas county outside of the Courier, ever printed one single line in favor of the people and the recall, and in all three of the big Portland dailies their Oregon City correspondents used the cold water freely.

Mexico serving an ultimatum on the U. S. Mexico telling this country it must recognize the assassin's republic. Once a fly lighted on an elephant.

The Enterprise says Judge Anderson and Commissioner Smith were picked up like chips on the sea and cast into office. They were some chips and it was some sea.

Wonder what Mr. Ely thinks of the taxpayers action on his Live Wire report? In legislative terms we might say "the house reported adversely on the minority report."

Secretary Lane paid $10 for a shave on a train between The Dalles and Portland. He must have thought the Commission form of government barred whiskers in Portland.

CANBY

The grain is turning out well in these parts and the threshing machines are busy. Mr. Philpine has moved into his new house. It looked all right to see the women casting their votes last Saturday.

Harry Cochran built a new brick flue for John Burns one day last week. Mr. William Porter has bought three Jersey cows and some fine hogs. It seems like he is going into the stock business in the future.

Mr. Shepard is at present engaged in digging a well on his place. Warren Kendall is remodeling part of the Blue Front store building. It is to be used as a millinery store.

Harry Smith made a business trip to Oregon City one day last week. Mr. Corbitts was out calling last Sunday. Irvin Wheeler and wife were in Canby Saturday. They came in to vote.

Mrs. Griffin returned home a few days ago from California where she had been visiting. She said she had a pleasant trip. She came from San Francisco to Portland on the Rose City.

Mr. Lucke has a new feed chopper in his warehouse. We had a nice little rain Saturday night. Mr. Pitts has just finished stacking his grain.

George Koeler has purchased a new clover huller. It will soon be time for the people to emigrate to the hop fields.

It is to be regretted that the name of this judge is not given. Every now and then the conservative man is forced to believe that the real trouble with the recall may be that it is altogether too polite and genteel.—Kansas City Star.

Oregon Equity News

We have nothing to lose but poverty. This fall and winter is the time to organize.

The Equity Warehouse Co., 203 Stark Street, Portland, wants produce.

In this political circus in Clackamas County the farmer has quit acting the clown.

The farmers of Clackamas county owe Professor Freytag a few lessons on how to run a promotion office.

With a failure of a corn crop in the Mississippi Valley how far are we from a famine?

Prices for any food stuff ought to run high now. Be careful and don't sell too cheap. Our home potato crop is short.

Texas has 321 warehouses. Our neighbor state, Washington, has 15 elevators, 130 warehouses, a state selling agent and several district selling agents.

John Stark, the age of Maple Lane, is going to start the organization of the berry growers soon and get thoroughly organized by next marketing season.

Judge Anderson elect is a member of the Grange and also connected with the cooperative creamery of Clear Creek farm. He is a farmer. J. W. Smith, Commissioner elect, is one of the State Board of the Equity and secretary of his home local at Maxberg. He is a farmer. Their big markets in their home precincts is significant.

I wonder if the railroads will claim a car shortage this fall. I wonder if the banks will claim a money shortage on account of big crops to move after such an awful drought and crop failure all over the crop raising section. I wonder if it will be claimed by the politician that we have an over production this time.

Eastern Washington and Oregon are pretty well organized by the Farmers' Union. Mississippi has 63 Union warehouses, one of which is a million dollar concern. It has a state newspaper, so has Oklahoma, Kansas, and South Carolina. It is claimed by this union that 20 state unions report to National headquarters. President Everett of the Equity, is working to federate all organizations.

Organizer Cutting's contract for Oregon has expired and the responsibility of organization work rests ENTIRELY with our state board NOW and we expect Oregon to be the banner state of a split Clackamas county politically has changed hands and we expect Attorney Ely to write the sale bills and George C. to be the auctioneer. There will be no bidding on records; everything goes.

The farmers who have put in so much time and hard work in producing this year's crop must not make the same old mistakes and dump it into the laps of a few speculators for a low price, who will charge the consumer a big price. Farmers, organize and market your produce in a systematic way. YOU should have the profit.

We have been waiting in vain for some of the workers of other counties to send in the news of their progress. We would like to hear from the county and local secretaries of other counties.

The Courier is going to devote more and more time and space to Equity work. We will keep you posted. We will help win the fight.

The Farmers' Society of Equity is going to sweep everything clean all the way down the Pacific coast. Oregon is soon to open the campaign. Any member caught obstructing its path will be relegated to the rear and the procession will march on.

The state of Kansas is trying to have an inexpensive session of the state legislature to arrange a loan of one million dollars to the farmer sufferers of drought in that state. Sec. of the Treas. is going to deposit fifty million dollars in 59 banks of our big cities in order to help move the crops.

And the farmer will not get this money in the form of a loan, but he will pay only 2% or nothing at all. It would not do to let the farmer get too independent. He might decide to store his crop at home and not move his crop to the big city until he saw a profit to himself.

Professor Freytag has written an essay on scientific agriculture. A donation of course and probably worth all it cost. He is a very prominent farmer of Main street and has his farm located under the roof of a promotion office where the work can be scientifically done, and he also has it arranged with the Commercial Club so rains or drought, blight, winds or frosts do not effect his income. He also has it arranged to give this free advice and attempt to his own business at the same time. We hope his next paper had been restrained from superfluous mundane inflation ascended to altitudes automatically by just such hot air from real estate offices.

We are always saying, "The worst is yet to come," but not any more. It is already here.

We all know about Judge Guthrie and the Kansas City Star, and about the judge who threw Alexander Scott into jail, but here is one that gets a faster gait. The Kansas City Times publishes the following:

A Memphis judge issued an order restraining the newspapers from printing certain affidavits filed in a case on trial in his court and forbidding the newspapers to mention the fact that they had been restrained. When the editor of the News-Scimitar told his readers that his newspaper had been restrained from giving them the news of a public court of record he was sentenced to jail for contempt of court.

Now, if anybody in that transaction was guilty of bringing the judicial process into contempt it was clearly not the editor.

It is to be regretted that the name of this judge is not given. Every now and then the conservative man is forced to believe that the real trouble with the recall may be that it is altogether too polite and genteel.—Kansas City Star.

The farmers of Clackamas county owe Professor Freytag a few lessons on how to run a promotion office.

Oklahoma has flour mills at Enid, Woodward and other places owned by the Farmers' Union. Also 23 cooperative stores and several clearing houses.

Did you register under the Bertillon system? Do you see with what suspicion the politicians regard you citizens of this state? It would seem that a University is not what is wanted here in Oregon, but a big, strong corral and a lot of dehorning devices.

President Wilson says we are going to get a system of Rural Credits. Now if the money comes from our National government direct to the farmer through our postal banks at the same rate bankers get it, it will be what we want and take the control from Wall street but if money is to come thru the big banks then through the little ones and big rake-offs to both it will do us no good, but help to fasten the control of money with the big banks where it is now, and help big business to become the owners of our mortgage farms.

Under our present system of banking 15 per cent of a bank's cash must be held as a reserve and part of this is not allowed to leave the bank so this unnecessarily keeps money out of circulation. It would not be necessary with government banks.

Secretary Daniels is reported as saying "This magnificent sight of a great harbor which God Almighty made for our navy and for the commerce of the world."

I am in no position to dispute the emphatic declaration as to God's intention, the Secretary probably paid a visit to Wall Street before starting on the trip and therefore speaks from authority.

In my boyhood days I was told the Divine Right idea was shot to pieces at Yorktown but it is not likely the teacher of my youth had heard of Daniels and the "profits."

Did you read the proceedings of the Oregon Industrial Commission recently held in Portland to determine what the minimum wage should be? If you did read it you noticed how carefully working women's expense accounts were gone into item by item. We were informed of the exact amount of what it cost for a woman to subsist upon. The total was eight dollars sixty cents and forty mills per week.

Now stop just long enough to compare things in this land of the free and boasted chivalry to women. You know we are all equal in this country but just sit down and try to picture the result of the expense account of the bankers' women folks or the Senator's wife, or the Governor's daughter, or milady who figures in the Sunday edition were thus scrutinized. Do you get me?

I am not finding fault with the Commission. They are dealing with conditions as they find them and are attempting to square the circle of an unjust social and economic system. On the whole I think some advance has been made here, society, that is to say the government, is beginning to take cognizance of the deplorable condition of our working men, the most helpless of the useful members of society.

There is where the keynote of the Socialist rings true and clear, that the workers themselves must seize the political powers and administer the result of the expense account of the bankers' women folks or the Senator's wife, or the Governor's daughter, or milady who figures in the Sunday edition were thus scrutinized.
