How far are we from a beef famine? The drouth of the cattle raising country of the U. S. has forced the farmers to sell their stock for lack of feed. Argentina has 29,000,000 head only, and there are diseases among them that ought to bar them from this country in order to save the remnants of our home herd. Do you suppose the beef trust or politics have anything to do with it?

We are not so much interested in the production of crops just now as we are in establishing a market system that will give the producer a profit. To get the farmer a profit is our aim. We propose to keep up this agitation and education until we are victorious. This market system is fostering a gang of gambling profit takers who are backed by corporations, their lawyers and tin horn politicians. The cost of living is high and the farmer poor.

We read where G. B. Dimick has raised some mile on his farm. This is a grain and fodder plant related Clackamas, Oregon; Clarkes—Pres. o kaffir and sorghum. It produces its grain like kaffir corn and has a larger kernel and matures quicker. It requires 117 lbs to equal 100 lbs. of corn. Rev. The Galilean agitator, who was born in a manger, still has a few disciples in the pulpit.

It is suprising how little we farmers know about the law under which we live and are governed. And farmers are no worse in this respect than the ordinary business man. This is used for argument against farmers for office. The trouble with the average lawyer is that he has lost sight of justice in looking for big fees from wealthy people, and justice is cheated by the tricks of court proceedure mette Valley attending the Round Up through technicalities.

What stumps our Equity editor is in telling the difference between law or government and this thing called voluntary agreement. Well, I absolutely know nothing about anarchy and my opinion would not be very valuable on that subject. But I am not in favor of adopting the whole thing at once. I feel like we had altogether too much of it now.
