"JOE" IS WHOLE THING

Missing Link Provides Much Amusement at Jones Drug Co.

"Joe," the educated monkey in the window of the Jones Drug Company, is attracting the attention of young and old, and all day crowds gather to gaze upon the intelligent animal. "Joe" is no scrub monkey and he knows it. He was imported from India, and is known as "the Sacred Monkey." This does not mean that he is compelled to attend church or is of a religious disposition, but before being brought from India he was worshipped by the natives and there was never a celebration of any feature at the Temple, unless "Joe" was there to be worshipped. It is claimed by his owners Dr. R. G. Hollidort and Dr. James Edward Naylor, chiropractors, who are at present making their headquarters at Jones Drug Store, that there are two such species of monkeys in existence in America, the one in their possession, while the other is owned by Barnes' Animal Circus Company.

It is stated that the Hindu never molest the monkey that abound in India as they fear if this is done that the spirit of some of their kinsmen has been destroyed. Their belief is that after death their spirit will return in the form of this animal.

In making a study of this species of animal it has been discovered that when the young of these animals die, their bodies are buried as of human beings and there is great excitement in "monkey land," all of the animals attending the burial.

Since being taken into captivity "Joe" has been on "the lookout" to learn, and drinks from a glass and can easily use a spoon. When he has his lunch he attracts the attention of someone. It was a few days ago that Dr. Naylor caught him making a "grab" at every fruit stand in sight. He is never specially sweets. He makes his wants known and he sets up a "roar" unless he is granted them.

He is given the best of care by his owners, who have provided proper clothing for his travels and when out of doors. This consists of a sweater of fancy stripes and a "swallow tail" coat. He is proud of his clothes and delights to wear them. One day one of his owners, attracted by his peculiar noise from Joe, and he saw the monkey trying to shave his face, have seen the men do it. A razor had been left near where the monkey was chained.

MARSHAL LAZELLE
COUNTY'S BEST KNOWN YOUNG MAN DIES OF FEVER

Cut Down at the Beginning of a Promising Future Life

Marshall J. Lazelle, one of the most prominent and enterprising citizens of Clackamas County, died at the family home at Twilight about two miles from this city, Friday afternoon after an illness of four weeks of typhoid fever.

Marshall J. Lazelle was born at the home where he died October 31, 1887. He was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Lazelle, prominent residents of Clackamas County. After completing his studies in the Clackamas County schools he went to Corvallis, where he took a special course in dairying. At that institution he was popular among the students, and was assistant editor of the College Paper, "The Barometer," member of the O. A. C. band and orchestra, also a member of a fraternity. Completing his studies at Corvallis he returned to Oregon City and for some time assisted his father in the dairying industry. Soon after he was elected as secretary of the Publicity Department of the Oregon City Commercial Club, and after several years with this position he resigned to again take up dairying. At the time he was taken ill he was engaged as a lecturer of the dairy extension work of the Oregon Agricultural College, and was temporarily stationed at Hermiston, Oregon, with the demonstration car of the college.

Mr. Lazelle has held many important and responsible positions in this city, besides that of secretary of the Publicity Department of the Commercial Club. He was past master of the Warner Grange at New Era, first president of the Clackamas County O. A. C. Alumni, President of the Clackamas County Poetry Association and secretary of the Association of Twilight School District No. 109, the latter offices being held by him at the time of his death. He was secretary of the Clackamas County Fair Association for two years, and was assistant secretary of the Fair Association in 1912, organizer and secretary of the Twilight Club, member of the Live Wires, of the Brotherhood of the Congregational Church, Elks, Masons and for some time was engaged as special correspondent for several magazines.

Mr. Lazelle is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Lazelle of Oregon City, and one sister, Mrs. Fred Atwood. Mr. Lazelle's wedding day had been set for Sept. 31 to Miss Leila Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Smith of Macksville.

Not only has Clackamas County, but the State of Oregon, lost a man that believed in working for the interest of the people as well as for the well-being of the state and county in which he resided. He has always taken an active interest in the building up of the county, and while serving in the capacity of secretary of the Publicity Department of the Commercial Club, he was the means of bringing many of the Easterners who were looking to the West for a home, to Clackamas County. No young man has done more for the building up of the County of Clackamas than has Marshall Lazelle.

The funeral services were largely attended, the orders of Elks and Masons attending in a body also the Clackamas County O. A. C. alumni and a delegation from the Agricultural College, composed of several professors, who were the young men instructors while attending college. W. S. U'Ren gave an address and spoke feelingly of the departure of Mr. Lazelle. The choir from the Congregational church rendered several selections. The services at the Canemah cemetery were conducted by the Order of Elks. The floral tributes were in profusion and were magnificent. The remains were laid beside those of his grandfather, the late James Bingman. The pall bearers were: M. D. Latourrette, Clarence Eaton, B. L. Harvey, Thomas Lindsay, Wallace McCord and Carl Joehnk.

Yet, no description can faithfully convey to the average mind the strength of the strength of the story, or the wonderful, yet natural situations the author has devised. Trapping a Horse Thief

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

A posse consisting of a sheriff and three men were climbing a canyon in Colorado. The canyon came to an end a few hundred yards above them in a pocket, from which there appeared to be no egress, the sides being perpendicular.

Suddenly the men came to a little cabin perched on a ledge overlooking the boiling mountain stream zizzagging down the canyon. A woman, a slatternly, ill favored creature with tousled hair, was standing beside a board supported by stakes driven into the ground just behind the door washing dishes.

"Is this Jaycox's cabin?" asked the sheriff.

"Yes. What dy'e want with him?"

"We're prospectors and have heard that he has struck paying dirt in a hole hereabouts. We wouldn't mind putting up some cash to work it if it looks well."

"Better have nothin' to do with Bill Jaycox. He'd get yer money, and you wouldn't get anything."

The sheriff picked up his ears at this, wondering if the woman could be used to help him and a man wanted for horse stealing.

"Oh, that's the kind of a man he is, is it?"

"There he isn't no meaner galoot than Bill Jaycox on no side of the divide. He's treated me brutal ever since I come yere to live with him. As soon as I gits those dishes washed I'm got to dig out and leave him to git on alone. There's nothin' mean about me. I'll leave things to rights."

"What's he been doin' to you?"

"Look a-here," said the woman, pulling up the sleeves of her dress and showing on her arm a recent bruise, then pulling her dress down over her shoulder and showing another bruise on her back. "What dy'e think of that?"

Up to this moment the sheriff feared that the woman was playing a part, with a view to aiding Jaycox to get away from them, but this evidence that the man and the woman were not being happily together convinced him that he had found her at an opportune moment to make her useful. Doubtless she wished to be revenged for the brutal treatment she had received, and an appeal to her capriciousity was well would help the matter. The relationship between Jaycox and the woman was a common one among certain rough persons who inhabited the mountains at that day. A woman, usually of very crude, would take up with a desperado, live with him as long as she could stand his cruelty, then leave him.

"Do you want to make some money?" asked the sheriff, pulling a handful of glittering gold pieces from his pocket and exhibiting them temptingly. He was watching the woman's eye and saw covetousness in it. If you'll turn Jaycox over to us I'll give you ten of these; he'll be '83 each."

"I'm powerful bad off for money," she said, her eyes fixed on the gold.

Robbed for the Fourth Time

A man who will rob a blind man, who is doing all he can to make a living at a tobacco stand, is so far below the professional thief that he would be dishonored.

Tuesday night the cigar stand of Willis (Doc) Mosier, was again robbed of stock to the value of about $25, and although the police are making every effort to find the thief, so far there is little clue.

This is the fourth time Mr. Mosier has been robbed in the past two years.

If it Wasn't for the "IT"

Notwithstanding the bad setback this city has had because of its polluted water source for the past two years, the city is steadily growing many new residences have been built and are being built all over the city, and there is hardly a desirable renting house to be found.

And what might our growth not have been if we could advertise that we had the best and purest drinking water in Oregon?

Once let this city provide this positive necessity and you will see this historic old town go some for it has what no other city in Oregon has to make it go—a great water power, great mills and great pay rolls.

THE SOUTHERN CROSS.

Its Name Does Not Quite Fit This Wondrous Constellation.

The Southern Cross, wonderful alike to those living in the southern half of the world and to the tourist thereto, is one of the most conspicuous and interesting of all the southern configurations.

Situated at a distance of about thirty degrees from the south pole, it is plainly visible in all regions south of the equator, and also to some distance north, about as far as the tropic of Cancer. The farther south one travels the higher in the heavens will appear the cross, and naturally the more conspicuous it becomes.

It seems to have received its name, not like the northern constellations from the ancients, but, like most of the southern configurations, from the Portuguese navigators, during their explorations into the southern waters. It is said that when Dante came out from "Inferno" he declared that he had seen a mighty cross set in the
