Better Roads

We all want better roads. One trip to town will convince us of that, but do we want bonds? Well, that depends upon where the good roads are to be built. If they are to be built between our farms and towns, to which we must go, they will be all right and we will vote for them. If the money is to be used to build the Pa-cific Highway, every farmer is against the bonds, with the exception of those living along said Highway. What we want is good roads to town. Let the automobile men and those people living along said highway route, build that if they want to, but do not allow them to compel us to pay for it. Now I would suggest to the coun-young girl, to the president of the Christian Endeavor Societies, just before she committed suicide. It was so very sad and made me feel as the I would like to warn all young girls of the danger rocks and billows that may come in their pathways.

The girl had become a happy Christian. She went to a social dance in a church parlor. (Who originated such dances? In the name of Christianity, me-thinks the devil did.)

That was where she took her first downward step. A young man invited her out to have a walk, a few kisses and flattery was indulged in by him. So they met again and again, and then a scandal. Her mother never had told her of danger of going out with the sentral idea, Charles A. Lindbergh as a central idea, Charles A. Lindbergh the congressman representing the sixth Minnesota district, writes one of the most interesting topics of the times, under the title of Banking and Currency, and the Money Trust. The book carries a copy-right of last year and is printed by National Captical Press of Washington D. C. It contains over 300 pages of plain talk on the subject covered by the title.

Mr. Lindbergh was the author of the money trust investigation in Congress, which held our attention from the federal Constitution, Article 1, Sec.

She was turned down and out and had all the blame and burden to Lindbergh was to arouse public inbear, while the rascal was out in high society hunting for another victim.

The government has to pay railroads for carrying their mail, pay them enough rent for their mail cars and to build them every 6 months. This could have been remedied years ago by the people, but most all of the newspapers are controlled by the trusts and you never hear a thing about the way the U.S. was skinned. It is true that we had a railroad com-mission in this state, which is supposed to adjust the tariff, and which have paid by land grants, and should pay the actual cost of their lines, and operate them at cost for the benefit of the whole people. If this was done it would cost less than half of what it would cost less than half of what it does now. Strikes would be a thing oughly organized and a good lively would be no losses to the people.

Most anywhere we go in the United States we cannot help noticing the tremendous number of musical students who come more or less to a failure of their study. Considering the loss of time, energy and money, we have a right to question why Are our people lacking talent, ambi-tion, or are our teachers incapable? To either of the three questions, there can be found some affirmative ground. Many of our students lack imbition. A vast number of teachers are shamefully incapable, besides an entire multitude of students have practically no gift for music, but with these three very familiar ans-wers, we find that the question of wers, we find that the question of failure is not yet resolved. If we refer to authorities, then the fourth and the most important reason for the fruitless results is blamed to an entirely too early drill of children for nstrumental playing, while for exe-cution early studies are even beneicial for the imagination or the musical thought, the monotonous exerworld's technic and lacking talent, we might become "piano pounders," 'cat-gut sawyers" or anything else, out never true musicians.
