> WOMEN BID DOWN Writer's Opinion of Women Who Take Men's Places

'Tis a well known fact, that fast as woman enters what is con sidered man's field of action, one of two things happens—either wages are lowered or hours increased.

Women bid down on the job in order to secure positions (which they may, or may not need) thus throwing out men upon whom, perhaps, families are depending, or, if the men are not thrown out of employment, wages are lowered; in either case, causing hardships.

a woman is capable, and wishes to do man's work, she should stand upon her capabilities, and demand the same wage and hours. Certainly, if she is competent, she should have the same chance, without any bidding down.

I wonder if there is any one who believes it right to offer a woman less f she be fully qualified, or that she has any right to lower wages or lengthen hours when they have already been established.

We will have an opportunity to voice our sentiments on May 15 next,
