TO FIGURE IN FILMS

Comedy Photoplay Will Have Setting in Midst of Local Regions

If you see what may appear to be a bunch of costumed fanatics cavorting about a farm in the near future, do not be surprised. Somewhere in the background there will be a moving-picture man grinding away at his camera, and the stunts that will be pulled off will be duly recorded for production in the latest of the photodramas. William C. and his company, from Portland, will be the guilty ones, and they are planning a novel play, which Clackamas county folk may see both in the making and in its completed form.

The play is a comedy. It will deal with the adventures of a Clackamas county youth who leaves the farm to go to Portland, and who will arrive in the city just at the time of the Rose Festival. The play will cover three 1000-foot reels of film, and the first reel will be devoted to a scenario near Oregon City. Whether the farmer's boy will go to Portland and fall in love with Queen Thelma of the Rose Festival or not has yet to be seen; but Mr. Card thinks that he will be scoring a novelty by having his drama an "all-Oregon" one. With Charles Schram, manager of the Grand theatre, he has been going over his scenario during the past week, and is about ready to stage his production. The last two reels of the play will take place in Portland.

The completed play, showing familiar Clackamas County, Oregon City and Portland Rose Festival scenes, will be exhibited at the Grand theatre in Oregon City in about two weeks. A large company has been engaged to act the plot, and local folk will furnish the minor characters.
