FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN
BY F.ETRIGG
REGISTER. ROCKFORD, I.A.
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

The reputation of the family dog, as well as of the boy, is to quite an extent determined by where he spends his nights.

Sunflower seed not only make a splendid ration for poultry, but the rank growing plants furnish much needed shade in the poultry yard, if no other shade is provided.

A good many gardeners are wondering whether this will be a potato bug season. For some reason not apparent on the surface there were very few bugs last year, a condition which was greatly appreciated.

By planting early medium and late maturing varieties of corn, and then following with plantings of late corn at intervals of a couple of weeks, the table may be kept supplied with this choice vegetable until frost time next fall.

Where sour or butter milk can be had it should form a continuous portion of the ration for the laying hens. It not only furnishes a supply of needed protein, but the lactic acid tends to keep the fowls' systems in an excellent condition.

An egg eating dog may be cured of the habit by opening one end of an egg and stirring in a small quantity of red pepper. The hole should be sealed by sticking on a piece of muslin paper. One dose of this kind is plenty for the average dog.

Too much corn and too little exercise is the reason for the small egg production of a good many flocks. Wheat and bran, sour milk and meat scraps should take the place of the corn, and the hens should be made to scratch for all their grain.

In the locality in which the writer lives a great many folks between the ages of thirty and sixty are having the mumps. Just why these people did not take advantage of their childhood opportunities along this line it would be interesting to know.

It is to be hoped that the time will soon come when there will be a law forbidding the adulteration of turpentine and linseed oil, as there is now a federal law prohibiting the adulteration of maple sirup. The consumer is entitled to the protection of the law.

In the writer's home state a law governing the capacity of berry boxes is in force this season. It was passed a year ago, but the berry growers and dealers were given a reasonable time in which to conform to the terms of the new law. Henceforth consumers of berries won't be paying so much per square inch for the air space beneath the raised bottoms of the boxes.

In cases not a few the value of a horse is reduced from 20 to 30 per cent because of its having poor feet. With this consideration so important, it is well to have the colt's feet looked after by a competent horseman if one is not qualified to attend to the matter himself. Often the simple trimming of the hoofs at the right time makes the difference between good and bad feet in the three-year-old.

The life of leather shoes depends upon the quality of the leather, but even more upon the care given them. Damp shoes should never be placed near a fire, but allowed to dry gradually. Dry paper or oats placed inside the shoes will remove much of the dampness during the night. Liquid paraffin rubbed on boots or shoes that have been hardened by dampness will make them soft and pliable.

Experiments covering a period of years conducted by the Nebraska station along the line of conserving moisture in the soil show that the growth of weeds is the greatest agency for the loss of water from the soil. Preventing weed growth was found to be more important from the standpoint of storing water in the soil than its cultivation to produce any kind of mulch. In the experiments conducted a loose, rough surface was found most effective in the retaining of soil moisture.

The troublesome crab grass, which is doubly so because it is deep rooted and flourishes in dry weather when most other vegetation is at a standstill, is fortunately only an annual and does not live over the winter. Last season the writer found he could control it nicely in his patch of sweet corn by clearing the field of it when the corn was between waist and shoulder high. The ground was so completely shaded and the moisture so completely absorbed by the corn roots that the grass had no chance. In the potato and bean patch it is necessary to keep the ground clean and prevent it from going to seed.
