

What a comfort is a nice Range

Dear Amy:-
Would you believe that in my nicely furnished home I've been using the same old stove too long to tell. Well, now I've put a brand-new range in my kitchen. How happy I am over it. The kitchen looks like another place, and the cooking tastes better. The new style stoves, too, are so much more convenient to use than the old.

Yours as ever,
Lou.

P.S.—Why don't you get you a range just like mine? So to

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE
Wages and Salaries Are Not the Same Thing, Says Uncle Sam

We live and we learn. Comes to hand now the census of manufactures for the city of Pocatello, Idaho, as prepared by our Uncle Sam. A summary of the government's investigations in the Idaho town reads as follows:

"The capital invested in 1914 amounted to $2,213,000, and the value of the products totaled $1,876,000. Other figures presented are: Number of establishments, 19; persons engaged in manufactures, 876; proprietors and firm members, 18; salaried employees, 76; wage earners (average number), 782; primary horse power, 3,828; services, $875,000; salaries, $93,000; wages, $782,000; materials, $864,000; value added by manufacture (value of products less cost of materials), $1,012,000."

The interesting thing about it is the differentiation between "salaried" and "wages" and between "salaried employees" and "wage-earners." This being the United States, where all men are supposed to be free and equal, we wonder that the distinction is made. We suppose that "salaried employees" are clerks and such, and that "wage-earners" are men who wear overalls. But at that it is an un-American distinction, and should not have been made.

Incidentally it is to be noted that the "salaried employees" get an average of $1220 a year, while the "wage-earners" average $1,000 a year. So the distinction can hardly be made on a financial basis—yet maybe in the eyes of the census bureau any man who gets under a thousand a year is a "wage-earner," while any man who gets over a thousand is a "salaried employee."

If that is the standard, we know a whole lot of "wage-earners" who do more and amount to more than some "salaried employees" in these parts.

ASK UNCLE SAM
If You Want a Job and Can't Find One, Go See Your Postmaster

The United States Department of Labor, through its local Branch at Portland, Oregon, again directs the attention of the public to the fact that it maintains a DIVISION OF INFORMATION for the benefit of employers of labor seeking help and for the assistance of workers seeking employment.

While this service is entirely free and available to all in both city and country, the Government realizes that it is the employer situated outside the larger cities and towns who is handicapped in securing competent help because of his remoteness from the ordinary labor markets. Therefore, it is particularly to such, comprising farmers, ranchers, orchardists, stockmen, cannery and manufacturers, that the Government tenders its free service. Employers can be put in prompt touch with skilled or unskilled help of almost any race or nationality and for any kind of work including domestic service.

Every Postmaster is an authorized agent for the Government's Employment Branch and will receive applications from employer or unemployed. Or such applications and requests for

ALIBI FOR LOGANBERRY
Fruit That Helped Make Bryan Farmer Is Really What It Is Called

That the famous loganberry juice as produced in Oregon is made from the loganberry and not from the phenomenal berry, is the declaration of Professor C. I. Lewis, chief of the Agricultural College department of Horticulture. This declaration is substantiated by the men chiefly instrumental in propagating the loganberry and the phenomenal berry in this state.

It has been widely reported that Luther Burbank, the originator of the phenomenal berry, has said that the Oregon berry grown and marketed as the loganberry is not the loganberry at all, but is the phenomenal. He is further reported to have said that the real loganberry is a greatly inferior berry, being small and of little account, and that in some manner the phenomenal became known as the loganberry.

According to Professor Lewis and other authorities the difference between the berries is not very great, but there is enough difference, especially in the vines, to make the two readily distinguishable.

MANY COUNTIES ENTER
Land Products Show to be Thoroughly Representative of State

More than one-half of the total area of Oregon and more than two-thirds of the state's population, will be represented by twenty-one counties at the Manufacturers' & Land Products Show, opening October 25.

The twenty-one counties have a total of 34,168,960 acres with a population of 646,494. Malheur County, with its 6,325,120 acres is the greatest county in area to take part in the exposition. Multnomah, in which is located Portland, the state's largest city, has the greatest population, but it is the smallest in land area.
