SCALES FOUND FAULTY
Nearly Half Those Examined Needed Correction by Officials

In a quarterly report issued by Fred G. Buchtel, deputy state sealer, tabulations prepared from the results of inspections show that 624 scales had to be adjusted and corrected, before sealing; that 495 scales could not be adjusted—needing repairs—under were condemned, or in other words, out of a total number of 2,958 scales, 117 of them were weighing incorrectly and had to be either adjusted, corrected or condemned.

In addition, many scales of the computing type, having charts of obsolete construction, were required to be re-charted correctly, or have the computations cover, leaving in use only the pounds and ounces for weighing purposes. The type of scale commonly known as the "family scale," owing to its inferior construction and consequent inaccuracy, is not legal for use in trade, and the State Office has issued instructions, that it be condemned and its further use prohibited.
