MORE ABOUT THE MOVIES

Is It Morals or Advertising Which is Worrying Certain Newspapers?

The Rev. Dr. Hawkins, of the First Methodist church, Oregon City preached a sermon on the movies last Sunday and expressed the opinion that there were too many "bad" shows that corrupted the mental viewpoint of young people who saw them. And he expressed great praise for certain papers that are just now bellowing daily about the "shocking things" shown on the screen.

It is to be wondered whether Mr. Hawkins has noted that the newspapers that are carrying plenty of movie advertising aren't saying a word about the lack of morals on the screen, and that the papers that aren't getting much movie advertising are shrieking about how wicked the film dramas are?

Some people are always suspicious of any violent and pronounced reform in a newspaper that starts in just about the time a rival paper gets more of a certain kind of advertising. To get down to cases, it may be remarked that the Oregonian and the Journal, in Portland, have a nice healthy amount of movie ads; but the Telegram hasn't. And it is the Telegram that is seeing such awful things on the screens.

It is also to be remarked that the national board of censorship is still working steadily and that its secretary has sent out a letter in which he remarks that the Portland censorship board is "narrow." And it is further to be remarked that the great mass of American people are pretty preoccupied, that they don't care for too much filth in their brain diet, and that they seem to be quite satisfied with the work of the national board of censorship. And it may be further remarked that not so very long ago a member of the Oregonian staff was a member of the Portland board of movie censorship as well, and that even then the Oregonian didn't find anything wrong with the movies as they are shown.

From which it may be reasonable to conclude that some people, like some newspapers, find fault with the movies chiefly as a matter of advertising.

As the Courier remarks elsewhere in these columns—has anybody noticed any of the county seat's "professional reformers" doing anything to further a public recreating center, where boys and girls can have healthful exercise all the year around?

SOME OF OUR WOES

Newspaper Publishing is Not All Milk and Honey, as Can Be Seen

Every newspaper has its troubles. And quite frequently the troubles are due to the too positive statements of the reporters thereon. A recent number of Puck tells the inside history of one set of these troubles, as follows:

"My boy," said the editor of the Billsville Bugle to the new reporter, "you lack caution. You must learn not to state things as facts until they are proved facts—otherwise you are very apt to get us into libel suits. Do not say, 'the cashier who stole the funds'; say, 'the cashier who is alleged to have stolen the funds.' That's all now, and—turn in a stickabout that Second Ward social last night." Puck is responsible for this alleged inside newspaper story.

Owing to the influx of visitors it was late in the afternoon before the genial editor of The Bugle caught a glimpse of the great family column. Half-way down the social columns his eyes lit on the following cautious paragraph: "It is rumored that a card party was given last evening to a number of reputed ladies of the Second Ward. Mrs. Smith, gossip says, was the hostess, and the festivities are reported to have continued until 10:30 in the evening. It is alleged that the affair was a social function given to the ladies of the Second Ward Clnch Club, and that, with the exception of Mrs. James Billweller, who says she comes from Leavitt Junction, none but members were present. The reputed hostess insists that coffee and wafers alone were served as refreshments. The Smith woman claims to be the wife of John Smith, the so-called 'Honest Shoe Man' of 315 East State Street."

Shortly afterward a whirling mass, claiming to be a reporter on The Bugle, fifteen feet into the street, and landed with what bystanders assert was a dull, sickening thud.

MANY USE FORESTS

Some Details of Uncle Sam's Work Told in Short Paragraphs

On the Alaskan coast the salmon packers, towns, and settlers use 40,000,000 feet of timber a year from the Chugach and Tongass National Forests.

It is estimated that 100,000,000 pounds of beef and mutton are sold each year from herds and flocks occupying the National Forest range. Timber trespass on the National Forests is no longer important in amount or character. The incentive has been largely removed by the availability of National Forest stumpage under free use or reasonable terms of sale. New trespass cases are usually the result of unintentional error in regard to title or the location of boundaries.

A million and a half railroad ties are now cut from the National forests yearly.

The number of animals now sustained on the National Forests in proportion to the area, is 50 per cent greater than it was 10 years ago.

The Forest Service is co-operating in game protection under definitely agreed plans with the States of Arizona, New Mexico, California, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Montana, and South Dakota.

SLIDE CAUSES TROUBLE

Government Engineers Kept Busy on the Yellowstone Roads

The lot of the engineer is happier than the policeman's to be sure, but he also has his troubles. Sometimes they are very big and expensive troubles like Col. Goethal's land slides at Panama, and sometimes they are merely bothersome, like Maj. Fries' landslides in the Yellowstone.

Maj. Fries is the War Department engineer whose work on the Yellowstone roads made it possible for Secretary Lane to open the National Park to motorists this last summer. He has had his big troubles, too, and has plenty more ahead before he gets Yellowstone's 350 miles of road surfaced and oiled for the good days that are coming.

The major's landslide is really not much of an affair, but, as the road system is narrow and a stoppage anywhere will become, if not instantly repaired, something of a disaster in a very short time, it stirs up feelings out of all proportion to its size. Gangs have to be called from other work and hustled to the spot at as nearly fire-engine speed as lumbering repair carts and Government horses can accomplish. A hose cart and service engine help out the simile.

The hill which every now and then, always, of course, at their most inconvenient time, slides down over the road, is composed of gravel and loose conglomerate rock, streaked with yellow slipper clay. There is a great-to-do to shovel it off. Meantime the engine has been set up and a heavy stream of water at 70 pounds' pressure is played on the earth above, so as to wash down as much of the stuff as possible while they are at it and thus lengthen the interval to the next slide; but at that the hill sometimes fools them and slides off soon afterward in quite another spot.

Maj. Fries has to endure this nuisance as best he may, because the expense of digging away the hill or replacing the road elsewhere forbids a permanent cure.

MOUNTAIN MADE OF MUD

Curious Formations Made when Earth Was Drying

In the Overland Route Guidebook recently published by the United States Geological Survey the history of the formation of the Wasatch Mountain Range, which overlooks Salt Lake City, is graphically told. Long before there were any mountains in this region most of the rocks in the Wasatch Range were laid down as sand and mud on the bottom of the ancient sea, where they became compacted and hardened into sandstone, shale and limestone. The sea bottom eventually became land. As mother earth has aged her skin has cracked and wrinkled.

In the Utah-Nevada region many long cracks were formed and the rocks on one side or the other were moved slowly upward or downward, forming long ridges along the cracks, steep on one side and gently sloping on the other. Such breaks in the earth's crust are called faults. A fault may be a few feet or hundreds of miles long, and the distance which the rock beds on one side slip past those on the other may range from a fraction of an inch to thousands of feet. When the rocks on one side are shoved up over those on the other side, the break is called a reverse or over-thrust fault.

Jelly Roll Recipe

Only Two Eggs Required

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

This Jelly Roll is fast becoming very popular on account of the way it keeps fresh. With proper handling it should keep fresh a whole week, providing it isn't eaten up in the meantime, for it is every bit as good as it looks.

K C Jelly Roll

One cup sifted flour; scant half teaspoon salt; 2 level teaspoons K C Baking Powder; grain of oil; 1 lemon; 2 eggs beaten light; 1 cup sugar; 1/4 cup hot milk; glass of jelly; powdered sugar.

Beat the sugar into the eggs; add the lemon rind, then the flour, sifted three times with the salt and baking powder, and, lastly, the milk. Bake in a buttered dripping pan; turn out on a damp cloth, trim off the crisp edges; spread with jelly and turn over and over into a roll while still warm. Dredge the top with powdered sugar.

Hot milk used in the jelly roll enables it to be rolled without danger of cracking. Have the milk scalding hot, also be careful to have the eggs and sugar beaten together until very light and creamy. Bake in a moderate oven.

K C Jelly Roll is illustrated on page thirty-two of the new and handsomely illustrated 64-page K C Cook's Book, which may be secured free by sending the certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the J. W. M. Co., Chicago, Ill.
