John Kallies was a Willamette visitor Thursday.

CHERRYVILLE

What is the matter with this kind of weather? Can you beat it?

The little showers of the past two weeks did no harm, but did do a vast amount of good.

Our local weather man says we will have an unusually fine late fall season and everybody can have an opportunity to get up in the hills and pick huckleberries, hunt and fish.

Nobody ought to go hungry this winter as the crops of all kinds are abundant. God Almighty has done His part.

Dr. Botkins and wife have moved back onto their ranch one-half mile east of the postoffice, as their renter, J. J. Steenks, drew a valuable claim on the Colville reservation in Washington and is anxious to begin improving it.

Prof. Dearborn, of Bozeman, Mont., with the state agricultural college, is visiting with his former associate, Prof. Couper, who lives one-half mile north of the postoffice.

Prof. Dearborn and family traveled in a high-power auto through Idaho, Montana, Washington and Oregon, and stopped at most of the principal cities, besides seeing a great deal of the country.

He says that intelligent people everywhere have been conceding the reelection of Wilson and, what seemed strange to him, most of them said after Wilson then comes Ford.

Nobody spoke with any enthusiasm of Hughes. Most of them spoke of him as the "Wall street candidate," and predicted he would get "bumped off" worse than Judge Parker.

Prof. Dearborn said people all along the route traveled by him agreed that the president's ruling on the threatened railroad strike was not only eminent right and just, but it was a masterly stroke of genius and would make him more than a million votes.

The railroad presidents' objections to the president's decision are in line with the rest of their tirades against any improvement that has been demanded in the past, which, instead of working them a hardship, have really been beneficial to them financially as well as otherwise.

It's true they can't continue to pay big dividends on watered stock, as according to Senator Moors of Nebraska on the floor of the U. S. senate no longer ago than last week: "From 50 to 60 per cent of railroad stocks were water and mighty dirty water at that."

The senator further said that government control and ownership of all railroads was in sight, as the public would not stand for this squabbling and destruction of business.

LOGAN

The late Thomas W. Foster came to Oregon from Texas with his parents in 1846 or before. Members of the family and relatives have perpetuated the name in the land title records of Clackamas county, there having been three or more D. L. C. tracts on Arthur's Prairie and vicinity bearing the name of Foster. Though he had the opportunity of having a large tract of the best land as a free gift, almost, Thomas never owned any land except for a short time in his later years.

He worked most of his life as a carpenter and for a long time his services were in great demand, as he did good work and had almost no competition. He was a quiet, peaceful man; was everybody's friend and nobody's enemy. He was a charter member of Harding Grange and remained faithful through all its vicissitudes. He had been a member of Lone Pine Masonic lodge most of his life. Farewell, friend and brother, may the best future holds for any man be yours.

At present writing it looks as if we are going to have some harvest weather at last.

A well drilled struck water for

George Kohl and the 30-foot well is half full of water, which runs in at the rate of 10 gallons a minute. George will have to have a large herd of stock to get the best of that supply.

Henry Babler is also having a well drilled.

J. C. Young's routes cover a large territory around Logan now.

Bert Foster and family have moved away from Logan. Bert is a grandson of Isaac Foster, a brother of Thomas W. Foster.

There is one crop that is short this year and no complaint is heard. Swatting horse flies and spraying the cow variety is not so strenuous job as usual.

The cows have a strenuous winter's job before them to chew up the piles of hay, but they seem not to be dismayed.

We congratulate N. H. Smith on being the owner of a Jersey cow that has made a new record standard for 4-year olds. Sixteen thousand pounds of milk is some quantity for a year's production, and nearly 800 pounds of butter fat is a profitable turnout.

EAST CLACKAMAS

Frank Gibb is building a new chicken house, 20 by 50 feet. He will need it for all his pullets.

Ed Ficken is building a new straw and wagon shed.

John Ficken was taken quite ill on Friday and a doctor was called to see him. He is somewhat better at this time.

EAGLE CREEK

Mrs. Ina De Moss and children, of Portland, were guests of Mrs. J. P. Strahl and Mrs. Brash for several days recently.

Several of the ladies of this neighborhood met at the home of Mrs. M. Brash last Wednesday and spent a pleasant afternoon with Mrs. Brash and Mrs. J. P. Strahl. They helped to tie out a comforter for Mrs. Strahl, and also organized a social club, which was temporarily named the "Smiling" club. Mrs. R. B.
