BLANCHARD UNDER FIRE
Chief of Police, Who is Captain, May Lose Official Head

Sentiment against Captain Lowell E. Blanchard, commander of Company G, O. N. G., was brought to a climax on Wednesday afternoon with the circulation of a petition among the business men and voters, asking the council to declare the appointment of F. C. Burk, acting chief, permanent.

Blanchard was released by the council in June that he might take command of the local guard company, which had been ordered to the Mexican border. F. C. Burk was appointed temporarily by Mayor Hackett. Blanchard has returned from the front, but the sentiment against him and the sentiment in favor of Mr. Burk has developed the petition mentioned. The document was signed by a large number during the first day of its circulation.

Sues on Note.

STORE CHANGES HANDS

Dr. Schilling Goes to Chicago to Settle Parental Estate

The optical practice and business of Dr. William A. Schilling was sold on Monday to Dr. Roy A. Prudden of Portland and the former will depart next week for California, where he will spend a fortnight before journeying to Chicago.

ROY A. PRUDDEN
(Successor to Wm. A. Schilling)

The new owner of the Schilling business has been well known as an optometrist in Portland and has had much experience in the particular lines in which he will engage here. Dr. Prudden has already assumed charge of the store and will carry out a progressive policy.

Dr. Schilling's father died at Chicago some time ago and the son is to spend some time at Chicago in settling the estate. Dr. Schilling has done a splendid business in his profession in Oregon City and leaves many friends here. He does not expect to return to Clackamas county, although he expresses regret at leaving.

Besides they tell us that booze is such a healthful drink. Beer is "liquid bread." Besides, it contains lecithin—nerve fat, in other words. You need it for your nerves! The real healthy people are the beer-drinkers! See how fat they are!

A recent Scientific American article says: "In appearance the beer-drinker may be the picture of health, but in reality he is most incapable of resisting disease. A slight injury, a severe cold, or a shock to the body or mind will commonly provoke disease, ending fatally. Compared with other inebriates, who use other kinds of alcohol, he is more incurable and more generally diseased. It is our observation that beer drinking in this country produces the very lowest kind of inebriety, closely allied to criminal insanity. The most dangerous classes of ruffians in our large cities are beer drinkers. Intellectually a stupor amounting almost to paralysis arrests the reason, changing all the higher faculties into mere animalism, sensual, selfish, sluggish, varied only with paroxysms of anger, sensual and brutal."

Dr. Howard A. Kelly of Johns Hopkins Medical faculty says:
"I consider, with eminent German authorities of enormous experience, that beer is exceedingly injurious and dangerous as a beverage. It has NO SCIENTIFIC MEDICAL ENDORSEMENT of which I know."

Life is a fire, consuming the tissues of the body to ashes. In the healthy person these ashes are cast off through the pores, or the lungs. Beer, any scientist will tell you, destroys the power of the system to get rid of its ashes, thus this deposits in the system. Accordingly the beer-drinker's fat is not fat. It is a combination of dirty grease and ashes.

Back on the farm, when Optimist was a boy, they used to leach off their ashes by pouring water on it and letting it seep through. Then the housewife would take grease and mix it with the lye, put it into a big kettle, and boil it down into soft soap.

SEEN FROM THE OPTIMIST'S TOWER

The other day the Optimist ran across a little verse with a sentiment that struck him just right. Here it is: "If I can stop one heart from breaking, I shall not live in vain; If I can ease one life the aching, Relieve one pain, Or help one fainting robin, Into his nest again, I shall not live in vain."

There are a good many ways of seeking happiness. An old man with a split bamboo pole, a piece of twine, and a bent pin was going through the motions of fishing over a bed of primroses in the city park. Jenks and Hosmer came sauntering along.

"See the old nut!" said Jenks. "Thanks he's fishing."

"Bughouse!" echoed Hosmer. "Daffy! Poor old guy! Let's take him up to Bob's place and make him happy for once. Hello, uncle, come and have a drink with us."

The old fellow wound up his line and trundled along meekly to the nearest bug-juice emporium. Each of his sympathizers paid for a big schooner of lager, then Hosmer asked: "How many suckers did you catch today, uncle?"

He wiped the froth off his long gray whiskers, and answered with a twinkle in his eye: "Seven, countin' yourselves, sir."

The "Equal Rights Association" is raising a wail because the horrid dry's are attacking their attempt to reintroduce the beer traffic into Oregon. They are not attempting to increase beer drinking in Oregon! They only want to make it easier for the old soak who keeps his ribs perennially pickled in alcohol to obtain the where-withal.

A recent Oregonian editorial says that all the beer sold in Oregon since the state went dry would scarcely make a bad smell in the bottom of one of Weinhard's vats. The brewers must be benevolent cusses if they are anxious to spend hundreds of dollars to get the brewery written into the state constitution of Oregon merely that they may make it easy for a few old toppers to get their booze.

Investigation showed that all the beer imported into Oregon during the first six months of the first dry year could be made by one brewery in eight days. Out of the loving kindness of their hearts they want to spend a lot of money, and get the brewery business written into the constitution of Oregon just to help out a few old soaks. Of course they are not planning to increase their trade at all! They are not in the business for money, but through benevolence!

Recent magazine advertisements tell us that Packer's tar soap and bay rum make the finest shampoo in the world. The soap and the alcohol together do the work. The soap made out of the waste grease and ashes of the "fat" beer drinker would fill the bill here again because of the 2 to 4 per cent alcohol it contains.

Then that nerve-fat, lecithin! Beer contains hop-rosin, one of the finest varnishes extant. This has a special affinity for the kidneys. And it contains some lecithin. Four carloads of the finest Bavarian beer, Dr. Reinitzer, of Gratz University, the great German government expert on the subject, says, has the same amount of lecithin that is found in one good fresh egg. I'll take mine soft-boiled, in the shell, rather than preserved in shellac.

Dr. Leibig, the famous German chemist who prepared that marvelous food product, "Leibig's Extract of Beef," says that there is as much nutriment in 44 large measures of beer as there is in the quantity of flour you can hold on the point of a penknife. You would have to drink one stein of beer every day for 365 days to get as much nourishment as there is in a five cent loaf of bread.

A recent German army pamphlet reads in part:
"There is no just cause for calling beer "liquid bread." A glass of heavy beer costing 25 pfennigs has no more nourishment than a crumb of cheese costing one pfennig. Almost all excesses and disturbances in the army are traced to drink. It is mostly beer that causes the mischief. Beer is not the harmless drink it was once supposed to be."

If you want an eye like a sucker, a breath like a hunk of limburger, an attic full of hushhush, a kidney like a varnished door knob, and a culinary department packed full of soap-grease and ashes, then take your nourishment by the beer route. I'll take mine in beefsteak and spuds, bread and butter, thank you.

The plea that we are protecting home industries by restoring the brewery to Oregon, thus keeping our beer-money at home reminds me of the experience of the young agricultural college professor. He called at a farmhouse, and fell over a hog on the front porch. Two shoats were eating out of a bucket at the side door. The lawn was full of them, and the place was redolent with the odor of hog. The professor said to the farmer:

"Don't you think you keep your hogs too near the house?"

A reminiscent look came into that worthy's eye.

"Waal," said he, "when Jim hed the typhoid and Jennie hed the dypthery and we got Dr. Jones out, he said the same thing. He said hogs hed no business bein' around the house, but fer the life of me I don't see how it's goin' ter hurt them."

It makes all the difference in the world whether you look at the question from the standpoint of the human, or of the hog. The fathers of the Brewer's amendment are looking from the standpoint of the unclean animal rather than from that of the sober citizenship of the state, that is all.

Class legislation is always a crime against good government. To write the brewers into the constitution of the state of Oregon, and to exclude their brothers, the distillers and vintners, is class legislation with a vengeance. Then why should the brewers be favored above all the arts and crafts by being recognized alone, in the constitution of a great sovereign state? What has the brewing industry done for humanity more than the lumber industry, or the sugar refinery, that it should be written into the constitution of Oregon? Truly this is class legislation with a vengeance, and the Optimist would oppose this measure, even were it the woolen industry, or the flour mills that claimed such flagrant class privilege. How

Pillsbury Funeral
The local lodge of Masons had charge of the funeral of John G. Pillsbury at Portland yesterday afternoon and many friends of the former Clackamas county sheriff attended the sad rites. Mr. Pillsbury died at his home at Woodmere, near Portland, on September 18. He was at one time a sheriff in this county and was prominent in the affairs of an earlier day. He was a civil war veteran.

Decree for Hoffman.
John Hoffman won a judgment of $500 on a note, $40 attorney's fees and the foreclosure of a mortgage on lot 5, tract 20, Boring Junction, in Judge Campbell's court Wednesday. The defendants to the Hoffman action were Mansfield and Inez Sonnichsen and Grace Dilworth.

Petition for Guardianship.
Susan Updegrave filed a petition yesterday for papers of guardianship for the persons of her three boys, Edwin, 13, Norman, 7, and Clyde 5. The boys are sons of Aaron Updegrave, whose estate amounts to $490.

A COMPARISON

You wouldn't drink from a rusty tin cup with a clean glass at hand! Well then, why pay as much, or nearly as much, for a pump with a metal valve seat

AS FOR A

Myers Pump with the PATENTED GLASS VALVE SEAT?

Metal Valve seats may corrode or rust. GLASS VALVE SEATS CANNOT. Metal Valve Seats harden the check leathers quickly. GLASS VALVE SEATS DO NOT. The patent Myers Glass Valve seat is well protected and is as lasting as any metal seat and far superior.
