CURIOS BRIDGES.

One in Switzerland That is Famed For Its Roof Paintings.

Probably no town in the world has such strange bridges as Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir, in India. The city is built on the banks of the river Jhelum, which is crossed by many wooden bridges lined with old and dilapidated shops and houses with balconies and lattice windows. Some of these are very insecure and look as if they might at any time fall into the river beneath.

Timber has always been largely used for building bridges, and the earliest one of this kind on record is that which Julius Caesar made across the Rhine and which he describes in his "Commentaries."

The roofed Kapellbrücke at Lucerne is one of the most interesting. It crosses the river Reuss diagonally and has 112 triangular paintings beneath the roof, recording the heroic deeds of old Switzers and the sufferings of their patron saints. In the midst of the Kapellbrücke stands an octagonal tower, which formed part of the fortifications of the town in the thirteenth century. The bridge was built in 1333.

One of the curious and ancient bridges in Europe is that at Croyland, in Lincolnshire, England, which is supposed to date from the thirteenth century. No road now passes over and no water under it. It consists of three pointed arches, which meet in the center, and the ascent is so steep that only foot passengers can go over it. Upon the bridge is a seated figure in stone of a rebel Saxon king.—Pearson's.

Boorish and Urbane.

"When we speak of a person as 'boorish' we mean that he is rude, ill bred and uncouth. We seldom stop to think that the word originally meant nothing more than 'rustic.' Boor is the same word as the German 'bauer' and the Dutch 'boer,' signifying 'a farmer.' The manners of the peasantry are alluded to in an uncomplimentary way by the history of this and many other words in the language. 'Heathen' and 'pagan' meant simply 'country bred' and 'village bred' once upon a time. Culture and the higher civilized virtues were thought of as originating in towns and making their way slowly, if at all, to the rural districts. So we have as an antonym to 'boorish' the word 'urbane'—which originally meant 'city-bred.'—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Vicious Dwarf.

Bebe was the favorite dwarf of the former King Stanislas of Poland. Born in 1741 in Lorraine, at the age of five he was twenty-two inches high and at his death in 1764 thirty-three inches. He was neither physically nor mentally active. Once Count Borowiaski visited him, and he became so jealous of the former's superior manners and intellectual qualities that he attempted to throw his visitor into the fire, but was prevented by the household.

A Disappointing Trip.

"I hear that you were invited to take a four day automobile tour with Mr. and Mrs. Whitty."

"Yes."

"How did you enjoy it?"

"Oh, I didn't care much for it. Mrs. Whitty was so enthusiastic over the scenery and things that she never told me a thing about any of our friends that I hadn't heard before."—Albany Knickerbocker Press.

WILSON SENTIMENT STRONG

Prominent Suffragist Sounds Feeling Eastern Clackamas

Returning to her home at Portland after having charge of a Wilson booth at the Eastern Clackamas fair at Estacada last week, Mrs. Helen I. Tomlinson, prominent woman suffrage worker and ardent supporter of the president, reports sentiment strong for Wilson in the eastern part of the county. Five hundred Wilson buttons were distributed at the booth and calls for many more were turned down when the supply ran out. Mrs. Tomlinson states that President Wilson is growing in the popular favor in that district each day.

"Farmers demonstrated keen interest in Wilson and his policies. They are particularly impressed with the federal bank law and the rural credits measure. One farmer who voted for Abraham Lincoln in 1864 will vote for Wilson," said Mrs. Tomlinson, who is a keen observer and a well-read suffragist. While at Estacada the lady was a guest of Postmaster W. Heylman.
