Well, we are architects in our time, and our architects are also engineers. We don't have to stop using a railroad terminal because a new station is becereal, desserts, butter, cream, olive ing built. We don't have to stop any of the processes of our lives because we are rearranging the structures in which we conduct those processes.

What we have to undertake is to systematize the foundations of the house then to thread all the old parts of the structure with the steel which will be laced together in modern fashion, accommodated to all the modern knowledge of structural strength and elastitions, relay the walls, let in the light ticity, and then slowly change the parthrough new apertures, improve the ventilation, until finally, a generation or two from now, the scaffolding will be taken away and there will be the family in a great building whose noble architecture will at last be disclosed, where men can live as a single community, co-operative as in a perfected, co-ordinated beehive, not afraid of any storm of nature, not afraid of any artificial storm, any imitation of thunder and lightning, knowing that the foundations go down to the bedrock of principle and knowing that whenever they please they can change that plan again and accommodate it as they please to the altering necessities of their lives,-"The New Freedom," by President Wilson.

STEVENSON IN HIS YOUTH.

And a Satirical Forecast That Became a Reality.

I do not think that in these early days Stevenson appeared to any of us as specifically a genius, an exceptional man set apart for great accomplishments. Indeed, had we been solemnly assured that he would share the honor, with only one or two possible competitors, of being the foremost English writer of the latter half of the nineteenth century we would certainly have received the assurance with a What! Louis! So simple, kindly, natural; so all round a good fellow; so like all the rest of us, only nicer! And I am quite sure that in his inmost heart at this period he could never really have looked forward to or expected the fame which later came to him and which grows and expands as time gives us the perspective wherewith to view it in all its roundness and bigness and essential simplicity. In fact, in introducing himself to me he remarked simply that he was "a writer chap" or hoped to be one.

I was told of a rainy afternoon "blague party," at which I did not chance to be present, during which Bob Stevenson arcused himself by foreeasting the future careers of those present. When he came to his cousin remarked with a satirical little smile: "There sits Louis, as smug and complacent as any old type de bourgeois. I have not the least doubt that he fondly imagines that one of these days they will be publishing all of his dinky private correspondence-the letters of R. L. S.'-in boards." And Louis joined as heartily as any one in the laugh which the sally raised. Bob, at least, did live to see the publication of the "Vailima Letters," and I have often wondered if he remembered this little incident as he thumbed their leaves.—Birge Harrison in Century.

fist, and cite as an example one who said "blessed be the peacemakers" Che and "they that take up the sword shall perish by the sword."

I cannot adhere to the doctrine that a righteous and peaceful condition can be established on this earth by brute force. I consider that all war is ruthless and that no especial act committed in conducting a war is worse than the entire war as a whole. The people do not know all the reasons why we should not mix in such a trouble, because the strongest arguments are rejected by most of the press. Our entire trouble has risen over sending munitions to Europe. A host of our best citizens showed that we as a nation were headed straight for the breakers unless is was stopped. It does not pay to become an accessory to murder for the purpose of making money. And the worst of it is, that the money is not shared in by the people who will have to do the fighting. We have sowed to the wind, we will soon be reaping the whirlwind. My motto is, "my country, when right to keep it right; when wrong to set it right."
