STAFFORD

(Too late for regular page)

The atmosphere looks quite smoky, although we have heard of no fires. Clover is nearly ready to cut and very heavy.

Fred Moser has purchased a new piano.

Fred Oldenstadt is having a new barn built with all modern improvements and invited all the neighbors to an old fashioned raising on Tuesday, the 19th. About fifty men responded and a number of the Ladies' Circle assisted the mother and daughters in preparing and serving a bountiful dinner. A long table was improvised from some of the new lumber, under the shade of trees in the yard, and plates laid for 42, while the rest ate with the cooks.

The annual school meeting was held at the school house on Monday evening and passed off quickly. Thirteen were present and elected Mr. Weddle in place of Dick Oldenstadt, whose term expired, and Henry Baker in place of Mr. Bushbaum, who has served satisfactorily a number of years, was reelected clerk. The new board decided the school house should be used as a civic center for old and young, it having been closed to all except political meetings for a number of years past, which is a grave mistake in any country district. The district of Hazella have been having social meetings of different kinds in their new school house all winter, which have been enjoyed by all, and a liberal quota of Staffordites have attended almost every meeting. Next Saturday evening they have a plain basket social, that is, the baskets shall not be ornamented by as much as a paper rose.

Last Sunday was Children's Day at the German Baptist church, and an excellent program was listened to by a crowded house.

Mr. and Mrs. Zack Elligsen entertained more than a score of relatives and friends at dinner on Sunday last. Gooseberry picking, canning, preserving and marketing is the order of the day. Price two cents if you pick them yourselves and four cents if the owner picks them.

Harry Elligsen is carrying the Oregon City mail from Stafford while Mr. Meeks takes his vacation, and is running a new automobile purchased last week.

Spraying is just as necessary to the successful growing of fruits and vegetables as the application of fertilizer and frequent use of the hoe.

Sherwin-Williams Dry Arsenate of Lead is the most economical and effective on the market today. It is an exceedingly finely divided fluffy powder which is greater in bulk per given weight than any other arsenate of lead manufactured. It is very adhesive and sticks to the leaves and fruit the longest possible time. It affords maximum killing power, yet is absolutely safe to use.
