When it is considered what a few loyal patriots are doing here for the American Red Cross in the way of sewing on moss pads, clothing and other necessities for the soldier boys, it is marvelous to think what could be done if they were accorded the assistance of those who could just as well devote a portion of their time as not. Wearing a Liberty Bond is far from fulfilling the duties of an American, say the Honor Guard girls. While the war lasts, our united aid will be necessary to hold up our end, and pink-tea parties on the lawn, while earnest workers are on the job nightly, are decidedly out of place. "Get Busy" is the slogan.

TED MILLER GIVES GRAPHIC INSIGHT TO SOLDIER'S LIFE

In the following letter, recently received from Ted Miller by his mother here, accounts of the conditions in France are in fuller detail than those usually passed by the censor. Ted was formerly linotype operator on the Courier, and was educated in the local schools. His parents reside at 10th and Harrison streets, this city. The letter follows:

France, May 13, 1918. Dear Mother:—Received mail three days running. Tuesday, 3 letters; Wednesday, a Post and 7 papers; today, 5 Literary Digests and a paper.

We had a smoker night before last and the main event was a good fight. Russell Fauley boxed 3 rounds with a Lieutenant, and, though no decisions were made, he put it all over the other. (The last word censored.)

The "Wing Slip" has resumed publication and am enclosing a copy. You won't complain of its being heavy reading.

Today has been hot. We are deciding that "Sunny" France is not a misnomer after all.

Saw a fellow at supper in a civilian pinstripe shirt. We won't be able to get into a stiff collar when we don "civies" again. We won't be able to get up in the morning without a bugle, or know how to act at the table. No question but what we've lost some of our veneer of civilization.

Am sending this through the base censor. Our C. O., like a good many U. S. R.'s, is a bit nervous, and will hardly let you say you're in Europe. He returned a letter in which I said we had heard the Liberty motor was a success and we were anxious to see it. The papers and magazines that you send us all discuss the Liberty motor freely, but it won't do for us to mention it. The Germans might discover that there was a Liberty motor.

The articles in the Post by Pattullo and Blythe are pretty good—first hand knowledge.

The "Y" announced last week that there would be no more tobacco for the States for a while, and started to sell one pack a day to one person; before it was two packs. The stock is going just as fast as ever, but is being distributed more equally. The "Y" does big business. When we are off duty, everything centers at the "Y." The soldiers are absolutely for it.

We had Mother's Day services last night and they were fine. One of the fellows sang "Mother Mackree," and a captain from another camp talked. He handled the subject beautifully and made the best Mother's Day talk I ever heard. I shouldn't say he handled the subject, for he just said what came to him and what everybody had been thinking.

The hut was crowded; it always is, for movies or services. A bigger hut is planned. After the services, "Lorna Doone" was shown on the screen. The setting was all you could wish for, the Devon hills and waters, the Doones in armor and whiskers, the court of Charles II, etc. We had "David Copperfield" a while back, which was fine; but I imagine not very exciting for those who had not read the book.

May 20, 1918. Talk about hot as Texas, I think France will be still hotter if it keeps on the way it has started. We lay around in the shade just like we did there, too lazy to move. The other night we had a big thunder storm, and thought the dry spell was ended, but it has been getting hotter every day. It's lucky the supply sergeant has a batch of summer underwear coming up.

One thing to be said for France, it is not dusty. The roads are hard-surfaced, and the fields are green. The country is beautiful at this time of the year.

Pig shaves are getting popular just like mustaches. Some fellows shave the top of their head, and leave the sides, giving a circus clown effect.

You have probably read that Headquarters has ordered economical measures to be taken in feeding the A. E. F. It's a big job, feeding an army. The Consolidated Mess here is almost a short order house, with having to feed day and night crews. I'm thankful, though, for the Y. M. C. A. Your tales of Hoovering, don't scare me much, either. I'd be perfectly willing to take a chance at your table.

Yours with love, TED MILLER. 98 Aero Sqdn., A. E. F.

They have added to their usual one night a week with the Red Cross at the work rooms, with meetings Wednesday and Friday this week, to aid in getting out the hospital supplies.

Next week, and continuing until the work is caught up with, the Honor Guard will meet three times each week, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, at the Masonic building.

JURY ALLOWS GANONG HEIRS $750 AS DAMAGES

After an hour's deliberation Monday afternoon, a jury in the circuit court awarded the defendants a verdict for $750, as damages, in the case of the State Highway Commission versus the heirs of the Ganong estate. The commission condemned a right-of-way across the Ganong property at Canemah, in making the new Pacific Highway water grade last fall. The heirs of the estate asked for $2500 damage on account of cutting off a strip from the front of their place—a number of fine black walnut shade trees being included. These were cut down by the commission, and part of the evidence of the defense was a cross section of one of these trees, three feet in diameter.

A case is now pending in the circuit court here, wherein the highway commission is held liable for damage by the heirs of the estate. Those on the defense of the case just closed were, Mrs. Matilda Mount, and Dr. Hugh Mount, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ganong, and Fred Shannon and wife. The latter are tenants of the property. The verdict of the jury was that $700 be granted the heirs of the estate, and $50 be allowed the tenants of the property.

Mrs. Selena Tanner, Athens, Ohio, writes: "I cannot find words to express my thanks for your kind advice. I never once thought I had catarrh of the stomach. I now have a good appetite, while before I was nearly starved." Those who object to liquid medicines can procure Peruna Tablets.
