THIS IS THE "MOTHER'S LOAN"

He is a member of the British Commission to this country, and he was commenting on the achievements of America in France.

"When the full story is told, it will be one of the most inspiring records of history," he said. "No one who has not been there can imagine it. The port where your troops land has been transformed as if by a miracle. Great piers stretch out into the harbor; lines of railroad, laid with American rails by American engineers and traveled by American locomotives, stretch away toward the battle lines. Huge storehouses cover the adjoining acres for miles. It tells you, it is marvelous what you have accomplished!"

And then he added, in afterthought: "You are pouring out money as if it didn't cost anything."

Pouring out money as if it didn't cost anything—that is our record in the war thus far. Our first year cost us billions more than the first year of any other nation. And now we are asked to raise in three weeks the largest loan ever subscribed by the people of any nation.

We are running this war in the most extravagant fashion; and there is not a man, woman or child in America who wants it conducted in any other way. Why? Because we value speed more than money; and speed is always extravagant.

Speed means more guns brought more quickly into play, and more ammunition to feed them. Speed means ships built at high cost because of overtime wages; it means airplane planes discarded as fast as new improvements come along. It means all this—and we bear the cost of it gladly, without regret. For Speed means a quicker, surer victory, and our boys earlier home again.

"I beat the Austrians because they did not know the value of five minutes," said Napoleon. His rule for victory was to be on the ground first with the most guns. "I owe all my success in life to having been a quarter of an hour before my time," Lord Nelson once remarked. His victories, too, were victories of speed. The cry of every American woman to her government today should be "Spend money faster!" Every ounce of her thought and energy during the three weeks dedicated to the fourth Liberty Loan should be employed in arousing in her own household and the households of her neighbors an eagerness to lend every possible penny, and to lend it quickly.

Thus the fourth Liberty Loan may become a message of far-flung encouragement to our boys across the seas; a message of unpleasant urgency to their foes. For every bulletin of the mounting millions will cry out in tones unmistakable:

"We are raising a greater fund than men and women have ever raised. We are raising it in three weeks, when smaller loans have taken four. Money is nothing to us—we sacrifice it gladly for the sake of speed. For the sake of a quicker victory, and the return of our boys to their homes."

In the spirit of that message let us face the greatest loan in history: a loan too large to be subscribed by banks and business houses—so large that it must come out of the little economies of women. A Mother's Loan—a cry from the heart of American womanhood for Speed.—Woman's Home Companion.

FRANCE AND NORWAY

TO PLANT DOUGLAS FIR

Tree seed from the North Pacific district may play an important part in restocking the forests of France and other European countries, according to District Forester George H. Cecil, Portland, who has recently received requests for seed of native Northwest trees for use in France and Norway.

The French government has asked for two hundred pounds of Douglas fir seed for immediate use, and also asked quotations on the seed of this species in thousand-pound lots. Douglas fir has already been introduced in France, with very promising results.

The district forester is also in receipt of a request from the Bergen experiment station, Norway, for small quantities of seed from Douglas fir, noble fir, lowland white fir, silver fir, white fir, western red cedar, and western larch for experimental use in Norway.

The seed collecting is now in progress at Indian Race Track ranger station, on the Columbia National forest, where Ranger R. L. Cline and a small crew are taking advantage of the unusually good seed crop and gathering cones of Douglas fir, noble fir, silver fir, and western white pine for use at the Wind River nursery and experiment station, near Carson, Washington. About three hundred pounds of seed are needed annually for this purpose. Enough additional seed will be collected to supply the amounts requested by the Bergen experiment station. The French foresters have been referred to commercial tree-seed collectors for the Douglas fir seed needed for their reforestation work. It takes 35,000 Douglas fir seeds to make a pound, according to Mr. Cecil; so it will be readily seen that a few thousand pounds of the seed will reforest a large area, plant 700 trees to the acre, which is the spacing used in the national forests in the United States.

Douglas fir grows over a wide range of the western United States and British Columbia, reaching its best proportions in western Oregon and Washington. It is common in the Rocky Mountains as well as in the Cascade and Coast ranges, and has been noted as far south as northwestern Texas. It may be destined to become the chief all-purpose wood of Europe as well as of the Pacific Northwest.

TUBERCULOSIS PROBLEM

IN OREGON A BIG ONE

Oregon has a big tuberculosis problem. The names and addresses of 133 Oregon soldiers who have been rejected because of tuberculosis have been sent by the Surgeon General to the Oregon Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis and the men have been returned to their home state. The government claims no responsibility in the care of these men, the inference being that since they have been in the service less than three months they probably had the disease in a latent form before entering a cantonment. The question of how to care for these men will be discussed at the Northwestern Tuberculosis Conference to be held in Spokane September 27 and 28. The district includes Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, Montana and Wyoming.

Oregon will be well represented at this conference on the program. Major Ralph Matson, well known tuberculosis specialist of Oregon, now stationed at Camp Lewis, will speak on "The Diagnosis of Tuberculosis for Admission to the Army." Mrs. Sadie Orr-Dunbar, executive secretary of the Oregon Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, will speak on "The Use and Value of Surveys." Dr. Marr Bisallion, associate director of the tuberculosis clinic of the Portland Free Dispensary, will speak on "The Value of Free Clinics." Miss Emma D. Grittinger, former superintendent of the Portland Visiting Nurse Association, will conduct the round table on "Public Health Nursing."

Other Oregonians who will attend are: Dr. R. H. Cliff, county health officer; Miss Marion Crowe, Portland Tuberculosis nurse; Miss Mary Campbell, superintendent Open Air Sanitarium; Mrs. Blanche Matland, tuberculosis nurse of the Visiting Nurse Association; Mr. W. P. Boynton, director of the Oregon Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis for Lane County and Dr. Robert L. Holt, secretary of the State Board of Health.

Delegates to the conference are being appointed by mayors and boards of county commissioners and by other organizations interested in public welfare. For further information write or call the offices of the Oregon Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, 503 Corbett building, Portland, Oregon.

MEN TO BE INDUCTED IN NAVY OR MARINES

Word has been received by the local war board from the adjutant general's office that hereafter registered men can be called for service in either the navy or the Marines. Heretofore, registered men could enlist in the navy or Marines before being called, but this new order from the adjutant's office eliminates all voluntary enlistment. The drafted men can state which part of the service they prefer, but it is up to the district board to say where they will go.
