THE HOUSE-FLY MENACE

The U. S. Public Health Service has just issued an illustrated 16"x20" poster calling attention, in a striking manner, to the dangers of the common house fly and explaining the best methods of destroying them.

In the center of the poster there is a vivid 4"x6" picture of a fly, showing clearly the thousands of little hairs on its body, wings and legs, which serve so readily to collect and carry the disease-breeding filth which makes this insect so dangerous to humanity. Smaller pictures show large numbers of flies swarming in and about outhouses, garbage pails, cuspidors, etc., and flying thence to the bed of a sleeping infant where they drag their nasty feet over its sweet innocent face, befool the nipple of its nursing bottle, and then go from the child to the dining room where the food and dishes are contaminated with filth and disease germs.

The poster also contains the following information and suggestions which we feel are worthy of the consideration of everyone just at this time, in order that there may be effective cooperation in the spring campaign for the extermination of a pest that annually causes the entirely preventable loss of more lives than the total number of our casualties from all causes in the World War:

"The house fly is a little insect but a great spreader of disease."

"Kill flies and save lives."

"Thousands of people die every year from diseases transmitted by flies. The most common of these diseases are typhoid fever, diarrhoea, dysentery, tuberculosis, anthrax, and cholera."

"To rid a town of flies, everybody must do his bit."

"There are many kinds of flies—ALL HARMFUL."

"Flies breed in filth, feed on it, live in it, and contaminate everything they lay their hairy little legs on."

"It is a good thing to swat, trap, or poison flies, but it is still better to prevent their breeding."

By keeping stables clean.

By removing all manure at least twice a week.

By keeping garbage in receptacles with close-fitting covers, which should be emptied and washed frequently.

By building only fly-proof sanitary privies when sewers are not available.

"The time to begin a campaign against flies is before any have been seen in March or in April of each year."

"A PAIR OF FLIES BORN IN APRIL MAY GIVE ORIGIN TO MILLIONS BY AUGUST. DO NOT LET THESE MILLIONS COME INTO EXISTENCE. KEEP THE FIRST PAIR FROM BREEDING."

"Street cleanliness and immediate destruction of all filth are the best measures against flies."

"Outhouses, homes, markets, bakeries, and all food establishments should be screened against flies. REMEMBER: NO FILTH, NO FLIES, LESS DISEASE."

BIG TIME FOR PORTLAND WITH EDIT. CONVENTION

E. E. Brodie has just returned to this city from the East, where he visited Washington, Chicago and New York City, having gone there to attend the executive meeting of the National Editorial Association. Mr. Brodie is the only member of the executive committee of the association from Oregon. At the national convention last summer, Mr. Brodie was instrumental in securing the next national convention for Portland, which will take place this summer. He claims that prospects are bright for a record attendance in Portland this summer at the 1919 convention, and that over 300 editors of national reputation will be in attendance. These editors will come from every section of the United States. Mr. Brodie, while in Washington, saw the members of the Oregon delegation some of whom expect to return to Oregon during the next week.

In New York, Mr. Brodie says that the prohibition amendment overclouds every other matter, and that city refuses to believe that the rest of the nation wants to go "dry." Mr. Brodie is publisher of the Morning Enterprise of this city.

THREE DIVORCES ASKED FOR

They were married at Calumet, Mich., March 25, 1885.

Christian Wiese asks the court to allow him a divorce from his wife, Myrtle Wiese, charging in his complaint that she deserted him, after calling him a fool, and showing bad temper generally. FARM POULTRY INCOMES
WILL BE ASCERTAINED

Farm poultry pays, and the poultry department of the Oregon Agricultural College has planned to establish a system of records on poultry demonstration farms in Oregon to obtain accurate statistics on farm poultry incomes.

The second highest income on Ohio farms is from poultry, according to figures compiled by the federal department of agriculture from a recent survey of 25 representative farms. Nearly half of these farms realized more than $200 from poultry and eggs, and the general average was $169. "This was accomplished without serious interference with other farm operations," says the report. Yet the hens were weak layers, averaging 86 eggs a year, and prices were low—ranging from 15 to 38 cents a dozen.

Aside from leading livestock receipts the poultry incomes were distributed throughout the year, while poultry was an important source of the home food supply.

The average flock of 124 birds on more than a thousand farms surveyed in Indiana returned incomes of $361.06. The average cash balance was $218.44, and the net labor income $174.77—34 cents an hour.

The survey in Oregon has been begun by C. S. Brewster of the College poultry department, who has established three demonstration farms in Sherman county. The work will be rapidly extended until it covers every poultry producing district of Oregon.

TWO OF A KIND

An American spending his holidays in County Roscommon, Ireland, fell into a conversation with a farmer who was feeding his hens: "I guess, Pat, you haven't as good hens here as we have in the States?" "Perhaps not," said Pat. "I'll tell you," said the Yankee, "about a hen my mother had. She went out one day and ate a feed of corn and returned and laid twelve eggs. She went out the next day and ate a feed of corn, and laid twelve more eggs. She went out the third day and laid twelve more eggs. She went out the fourth day and hatched seventy-two chicks out of the thirty-six eggs. Two of them are the kind of hens we have in the States." "Well," said Pat, "I'll tell you about a half-blind hen my mother had. She ate a feed of sawdust, thinking it was oatmeal; she went to her nest and laid a plank twelve feet long. Again on the second day she ate more sawdust, and laid another twelve-foot plank. She sat on the three planks and hatched three kitchen chairs, a sofa, one table, a mahogany chest of drawers. Now," said Pat, "with a twinkle in his eye, 'that is the kind of hens we have in Roscommon.'"

SHOE CONSERVATION

W. H. Kelley, a lumber salesman, of Omaha, found Neolin Soles so tough and durable that one pair of soles served on a second pair of uppers after the first pair of uppers had worn out in ten months of hard walking.

And he says, "Those same soles will stand another ten months of constant daily wear."

This is unusual service even for Neolin Soles but Mr. Kelley's experience should indicate to you a method of cutting down those rising shoe bills you have to meet. Simply make sure the new shoes you buy are Neolin-soled and have worn shoes repaired with these soles which are scientifically made to be comfortable, waterproof and exceedingly long-wearing. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels, guaranteed to outwear any other heels.
