RECITAL TO BE GIVEN PARKPLACE SCHOOL FRIDAY

On next Friday evening, a recital will take place at the Parkplace school, and Mrs. Senn, electioneer from the O. A. C. college will render several numbers on the program. The recital is given under the auspices of the school, and Professor Flechtner will arrange the musical numbers for the evening. The general public is invited to attend.

Obituaries

Mrs. Elizabeth Herre

The remains of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Herre, wife of Captain Herre, were interred in St. John's Catholic cemetery in Oregon City Friday, following the last services at the Catholic church in Milwaukie. Mrs. Herre, who was a daughter of Joseph Webber, a well known resident of Milwaukie, died in Manila, P. I., March 17, and the remains were cremated and brought to this country for burial in compliance with the last request of the deceased. The husband is commander of the ship Libby Maine, built in Portland, which previously had a run between Seattle and the Philippine Islands, but is now plying between Seattle and Alaskan points.

Auto Collision Judgment

E. W. Fowler won a judgment Friday of $70 against John Demming in a suit growing out of an automobile collision at Seventh and Washington streets, which, Fowler alleged, had been caused by Demming's careless driving. Demming's car struck that of Fowler with an impact that should cost the former $100, Fowler recited in his complaint.

TAYLOR SENTENCED THEN PAROLED BY CAMPBELL

A jury in the circuit court Friday returned a verdict of guilty against Edwin Taylor, charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor, and asked the leniency of the court in determining sentence. Judge Campbell sentenced the young man to six months in jail, and later paroled him on good behavior.

MEAT DEMONSTRATION MEETING

Recently, a hundred pound pig was canned at the home of Mrs. George Bliss in the Carus neighborhood. Mrs. Bliss acted as local demonstrator before about twenty women of the neighborhood, and the Home Demonstration Agent. The whole process of canning meat was demonstrated, from testing each jar and cover to the finished product. Each woman actually helped prepare the meat for the can by either frying, slicing or packing it. Many questions were asked Mrs. Bliss and Miss Anthony. The crowd also saw some soap made from the rinds of the pig. It was a very interesting and profitable meeting, for the women not only learned more of canning in general and meat in particular, but they helped Mrs. Bliss can her pork.

"Somewhere in France"

"I told the rest to get in and get the stretcher. They needed no second urging, and soon French was left there alone, sitting on the ground, holding his dying officer's head in his lap. A pretty picture, I call it. He sure was a man, was French—with the bullets cracking overhead and kicking up the dirt around him."

Just then Happy butted in with: "Were you one of the men who went in for the stretcher?"

They answered: "None of your d—business. If you blokes want to hear this story through, don't interrupt."

Happy vouchsafed no answer. "About ten minutes after the fellows left for the stretcher, French got a bullet through the left arm."

Sailor Bill interrupted here: "How do you know it was ten minutes?"

They blushed and answered: "French told me when he got back to the trench. You see, he carried the officer back through that fire, because the stretcher bearers took too long in coming out."

I asked they how Corporal French, being wounded himself, could carry Lieutenant Newall in, because I know Lieutenant Newall to be a six-footer and no lightweight. You see, he had at one time been in command of my platoon at the training depot in England.

They answered: "Well, you blokes give me the proper plp, and you can all bloom in well go to h—, and he shut up like a clam."

Hungry Foxcroft got up and silently withdrew from our circle. In about ten minutes he returned, followed by a tall, fair-haired corporal who wore a little strip of gold braid on the left sleeve of his tunic, denoting that he had been once wounded, and also wore a little blue and red ribbon on the left breast of his tunic, the field insignia of the Distinguished Conduct medal.

Hungry, in triumph, brought him into our circle and handed him a fag, which he lighted in the flame from the candle on the mess tin, and then Hungry introduced him to us:

"Boys, I want you to meet Corporal French."

He shook hands with all the boys. They got red and was trying to ease out of the candle light, when Sailor Bill grabbed him by the tunic and held him.

Then Hungry Foxcroft carried on: "French, I'm going to ask you a mighty personal question, and I know you'll answer it. How in h— did you, hit in the left arm, bring Lieutenant Newall back from that reconnoitering patrol?"

French grew a little red, and answered:

"Well, you see, boys, it was this way. Honey and I stuck out there with him, and, taking the slugs from our rifles, Honey made a sort of rope which he put around my shoulder, and Honey, getting the lieutenant by the legs, we managed to get him into the trench. You know, I got a D. C. M. out of the affair, because I was the corporal in charge. Darned unfair, I call it, because they only handed Honey the Military medal, but if the true facts were known he was the bloke who deserved, not a D. C. M., but a V. C. (Victoria Cross)."

We all turned in Honey's direction. Bill, in his interest, had released his hold on Honey's tunic and Honey had disappeared.

Happy asked French if the lieutenant had died in No Man's land.

French, with tears in his eyes, answered: "No, but the poor lad went west after we got him to the first-aid dressing station, and next day we buried him in the little cemetery at Fromelles. He sure done his bit, all right, blame me, and here I am, bloomin' well swankin' with a ribbon on my chest."

A dead silence fell on the crowd. Each one of us was admiring the modesty of those two real men, French and Honey.

But such is the way in the English army—the man who wins the medal always says that the other fellow deserved it.

And Germany is still wondering why they cannot smash through the English lines.

COMMUNITY MEETINGS

Ever since the days of Adam and Eve, the family has been the original unit of civilization. But as the human race developed it was found necessary for people to live in communities. At first these were wandering tribes, but as they grew in wisdom, they learned to cultivate the land and stay in one place. Soon neighboring communities joined together to better protect themselves, and for the benefits of the exchange of goods; and thus small nations were formed.

At the present writing our old world has these three fundamental forms of social organization,—the family, the community, and the nation. Each of the three is absolutely necessary. And our happiness and welfare as individuals depends on bettering the family relation, the community organization, and the national unity. When one of these three is weak, as we observe in Russia today, there is chaos; then the family life is not safe, then the community falls to pieces, and the nation is an empty shell.

Of late years with the development of quick transportation, there has been a tendency to lose the community spirit. In many places there are no meetings to bring neighbors together. In place of a friendly gathering, there are quarrels, bickerings and distrust. In such places, people are moving down in the scale of civilization, and not upward.

Other places have been quick to see the value of community meetings. They get together regularly with all the family and have a program that is both educational and enjoyable. They discuss their common problems and take steps to solve them.

Perhaps the most striking example of a successful community club is at Wilsonville. A few weeks ago they organized a Community Club with a membership of eighty, charging fifty cents for the men, and twenty-five for the women. They meet twice a month, and at each meeting there is a good program and a bountiful feed. There are many others in the County, some organized as Granges, some as Farmers' Unions, some as Loyalty Leagues, some as Literary Societies. Where such organizations exist the people are happier; they make more money because they meet and exchange ideas, and their land is more valuable because they are not trying to sell out to get away from their neighbors. Their children are better educated, and more willing to stay on the farm, because they have debates and give plays and learn music, and have proper forms of recreation which their nature demands.

The Farm Bureau is working with these organizations. We are able to help out on their programs by giving talks and demonstrations. From these Community organizations are chosen the committee men who compose the Farm Bureau. Through the Farm Bureau these local organizations are united into one strong County-wide league. Through the Farm Bureau the similar problems of different sections are attacked by united action.

Though much has already been done along this line, still there is room for a vast improvement. The Farm Bureau team will not be satisfied until every community in the County meets regularly to discuss the business of the community and to get the pleasures and benefits of

WAYS OF ERADICATING SLUGS

Larvae May Be Combated by Using Arsenate of Lead, Hellebore or Tobacco Decoction.

(By C. P. GILLETTE, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

The slimy looking larvae of "slugs" that eat the surface of the leaves of cherry and pear trees are easily killed. If there is no fruit on the trees, the best way is to spray the trees with arsenate of lead in the proportion of one pound of powder, or two pounds of the paste, to each 50 gallons of water. A fine spray is best and should be applied so as to cover the upper surface of the leaves, where most of the feeding is done.

In case there is fruit on the trees you may use white hellebore, one ounce to three gallons of water. This will kill the slugs and do no harm to people who eat the fruit.

The same results may be secured by spraying with a strong tobacco decoction, such as Black Leaf 40, one part in 800 parts of water.

A thorough dusting with slaked lime, ashes or fine road dust will usually be successful in removing the slugs from the leaves.

BULL ASSOCIATIONS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) The bull association cannot give you something for nothing, but it can furnish you a share in from three to five $300 bulls for $50. These bulls cannot increase the production of the cows you now have, but they may double the production of the daughters. The daughters of association bulls and grade cows can never be registered, but in every other respect they may be the equal of purebreds. The bull association cannot compel you to join, but if you do join you will soon own a better herd and become a better farmer.

INCREASED SUPPLY OF MEAT

Hen Is Main Dependence, but She Must Have Assistance From Turkeys, Geese and Ducks.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The hen, first and last, is the main dependence for increasing the supply of white meat and eggs, but she requires the aid of turkeys, geese, ducks and ducks, just as, on a dairy farm, the cow requires the aid of pigs, sheep and goats.

PRINCE ALBERT

the national joy smoke

SAY, you'll have a streak of smokeluck that'll put pep-in-your-smokemotor, all right, if you'll ring-in with a jimmy pipe or cigarette papers and nail some Prince Albert for packing!
