DISTURB THE PEACE ARE ARRESTED; PUT UP FIGHT

Joseph Chuck and Arthur Ball, of Portland, two young men who formerly resided in Oswego, came to that day and were arrested by Town Marshal James Hendrick, charged with fast driving, cutting corners and generally disturbing the peace and solemnity of the occasion by boisterous conduct, induced, it is alleged, by the liberal use of the contents of a bottle of liquor.

Mr. Hendrick started taking the men to Oregon City to place them in the sheriff's care. Oswego residents in the meantime telephoned the sheriff, which official sent a deputy out on the road to meet the party. The two prisoners, while on the way, started to assault the town marshal and were only subdued by the timely arrival of the deputy sheriff.

The two men, after a night in the county jail, were released under bonds of $25 to appear for hearing Monday afternoon. Up-to-date there has been no appearance.

WHAT THE NET FISHERMEN THINK OF THE PRESENT FISH LAWS

"Although the Willamette river, above Oswego, was literally full of fish, very few fish were caught by either net or hook. The net fishermen, restricted from fishing above Oswego, caught in the neighborhood of 15 tons in comparison to the average of 200 tons in other years. This means a loss of about $35,000 to Clackamas county fishermen."
"The hook and line fishermen, although they fished where the fish were the thickest, did not get 20% of the fish they used to catch in the same locality when the nets operated there. This proves again that net fishing makes hook and line fishing better, for it seems that the nets stir the fish up and cause them to bite the spoon. In former years anglers have caught as high as 500 pounds of salmon in a day, after the net season opened."
"The Multnomah Angler's Club, which is mostly responsible for the

if they would pass such legislation all they would have to do is to come up to Oregon City and catch as many fish as they wanted and then go home. They have learned their mistake for never before have so many anglers been out fishing after May 1st, as this year, and so few fish caught.

"The net fishermen were strongly opposed to such legislation, for they wanted real protection of fish. They believe in allowing the needed amount of salmon to reach the spawning grounds, but are opposed to the sending of the Willamette river salmon spawn to other rivers and are strongly opposed to letting the salmon that do not go over the falls, die in the tail races, while people of Clackamas county and other counties have to pay exorbitant prices for fish shipped in from California or Washington.

"In former years people of this locality would come to the river and buy all the fish they needed at a very reasonable price; but this year fishermen were forbidden to sell fish to the public.

"Summing up the whole matter, we have fish here in our river; if caught by hook and line they cannot be sold; the net fishermen are not allowed to catch them; the fish will either get to the spawning grounds (which if they do, their spawn will be taken to other rivers), or die in the millraces and tailraces, while people are hungry for fresh fish. In a few words they are taking away our fresh fish supply to other rivers."
