Up-to-date Information to Help Develop Progressive Farming

Farm Management Important
"Management of the farm has more to do with its earning capacity, than methods of production or marketing," says H. D. Scudder, professor of farm management at O. A. C. "Farmers have been thinking more of better production methods than better farm business. Better production methods must always be considered, but organization methods have more to do with success of the farm enterprise." Size, quality and diversity of business, layout of farmstead, labor efficiency, rotation of crops, machinery equipment are named as factors of success in farming.

Farm Flocks Need Care
The farm poultry flock to be profitable, must have careful attention in selection of stock and care of the birds, reports O. C. Crum, of the O. A. C. Experiment station. Very little neglect, he says, may result in weakened vitality. The male bird is half the flock, he considers, and must be of right stock and good quality.

Agriculture Needs Stability
Agriculture must be stabilized so that the farmer may depend on reasonable profits, President W. J. Kerr of the Oregon Agricultural College told a conference of farmers at Farmers' Week. Agriculture being the basis of the industry, the prosperity of the nation rests on it. The farmer must meet the agricultural needs of the world.

Ten Reasons for Cooperation
The department of agriculture offers the following ten reasons why farmers should cooperate:
1. To assemble their products most economically at country points.
2. To establish and maintain plants for handling their products at country points.
3. To become a factor and wield an influence in the marketing of their products.
4. To undertake actual commercial distribution of their products.
5. To obtain efficiency in the marketing of their products.
6. To stabilize the supply in accordance with the market demand.
7. To secure for producers the services of marketing experts.
8. To reduce the cost of supplies required in marketing.
9. To eliminate speculation and waste.
10. To secure direct and orderly distribution.

Hampering a Law
The American Farm Bureau Federation, together with other farm organizations is endeavoring to have a larger salary than $4500 provided in the deficiency appropriation bill, for the person who would administer the Grain Future Trading Act. The bill not only limits the rate of compensation, but says that only one person shall be employed even at that salary. The Future Trading Act erects machinery for the regulation of trade amounting to billions of dollars annually. The person who administers the act should have an excellent working knowledge of the intricacies of grain trading and the system of handling grain and any such man in the trade would be worth several times the amount provided by congress in this bill.

Fry These
Fried Beets—Cook three large beets till tender, plunge into cold water and remove the skins; cut into thick slices dredge in cracker dust or flour and fry in pork fat.
Carrot Fanny—Pare and cut into dice enough carrots to make a cupful, boil them in stock until tender. Let them boil hard, but do not let the pieces be broken. Into a saucepan put a tablespoonful of butter and when very hot add the carrots. Season with salt and pepper. When slightly browned, serve.

An agricultural paper calls attention to the fact that the armistice which was signed in 1918 did not end all wars. The farmers in Clayton county have been carrying on a war during the past year on the loofer hen. During the past year a total of 280 farms have been visited, with a total of 37,338 hens culled. Of these hens, 3,338 were found to be notorious loafers.

Judging by the Eye
Mr. Roy E. Jones, poultry specialist at Storr's Agricultural College, is responsible for the claim that the eye of a hen will tell whether or not she is laying. Mr. Jones says:

"All yellow-skinned varieties of poultry should carry a surplus of yellow pigment of fat previous to the time they start laying, and unless decidedly out of condition are bright yellow in beak edge of the eyelid and shanks. The surplus of color pigment or fat is slowly depleted by production, the color changes being apparent first where the blood circulation is most rapid. The tissue around the vent expands with production and the yellow color disappears after a very few eggs have been produced. If production continues, the vent becomes white and after long, heavy production, a bluish white.
"The edge of the eyelid, or eye-ring is next to fade, losing all trace of yellow after a few eggs have been produced. It seems far-fetched to say that you can look a hen in the eye and tell if she is laying, nevertheless it is easily done. The fading of the beak starts at the base of the beak and works out toward the tip. The shanks are last to lose color, and do not, as a rule, fade, until after several months of production."

The Importance of the Strain
Breeders of live stock have properly come to look upon the strain within a breed as of importance comparable to that of the breed itself. A case in the poultry world has just been reported, indicating in a definite way this importance.

"Lady Dryden," a Barred Plymouth Rock hen developed by the Oregon Agricultural college poultry department has established a new world record for the heavy breeds of poultry by laying 324 eggs in one year. Not only is the record the top one for the top one for the heavy breeds, but it approaches within a few eggs the world record for all breeds, including the specially bred Leghorns.

While the Plymouth Rock is recognized as a high-producing fowl, from the standpoint of both meat and eggs, it is not to be understood that this record is the result of breed characteristics alone, but rather a combination of the breed characteristics and those of a peculiarly high-producing strain within the breed.—Pacific Homestead.

Freak Crops Costly
Time and money are lost by Oregon farmers each year through promotion of freak crops by dealers who sell seed at high prices by misrepresentation, says G. R. Hyslop, chief of farm crops at the O. A. C. Experiment station. The station invests money every year in investigation of these freaks and has established a service to keep growers informed of the results of trials. If the crops are not profitable, the station finds it out and will tell any inquirer, who may thus save the loss of money and crop that comes from failure. Alaskan, Titanic (durum and Polish wheats, emmer, and Eureka clover are some of the "wonder" crops found generally unworthy.
