The following were present: George Hofstetter, Edward and John Leichtweis, Charles and Albert Gasser, Clyde Ringo, Sam Elmer, E. E. Berger, Charles, Theodore William and Fred Marshall, James Rutterford and Mr. Crockett. Mr. Holt explained how to select seed and treatment, also spoke about the different kinds of diseases and how to overcome them. Right after the demonstration they took orders and about 50 sacks were ordered. Mr. Berger and Mr. C. Marshall went to a party, Dave Long, about seven miles from Oswego and bought the potatoes the Beaver Creek Co-op Comp. truck will bring them out this week. We all will try to raise spuds in the future, according to O. A. C. regulation and also the kind that the market demands. We all hope to get rich for sure especially if the Portland people buy their potatoes from North Yakima, like they have done in the past. Somebody said Portland would raise a tax in Yakima to finance the 1925 fair. Portland is very much in favor of home trade.
In the past Oregon farmers have had to send potatoes to California, now the Oregon farmers could like wise buy the groceries, dry goods and farm implements from California dealers direct and so we would not need any Portland brokers.
