A DUTY OF THE STATE

A strike characterized by lawlessness and even bloodshed has been on for weeks at the water front in Portland. The assaulted have been rushed to the hospitals or to their homes. The assaulters have been arrested and the jails and courts occupied with men who demand certain conditions for work and not being able to force their demands take the position that other men similarly situated in the industrial marts of the community shall not take their places and thus thwart them in their demands for certain wages and conditions.

Upon the basis that might makes right the strikers took the law into their own hands and committed unlawful acts against the state and committed personal wrong upon their fellow men.

The employers aver they cannot grant the conditions the striking longshoremen would impose through their union and stand upon the assumption that they have a right to employ whom they will. And then the strike breaker takes the position that he has a right to earn his living when, where and by what legal way he chooses.

All three parties may be and are probably wrong in the premises taken with reference to methods of settlement. The strikers in the methods of assault and personal injury; the employers in applying methods which mean industrial warfare without first trying means promotive of fair and peaceful adjustment of differences. The strike breakers tempt their fellowmen at a period of highest tension to unjust provocation.

The state, however, fails in its duty most of all. The State Mediation Board should have the authority to review such industrial troubles with a view to minimizing the hatred engendered; and to bring together employer and employees to consider the welfare of each other and the state itself.

The interests of the state are always affected as are those of the employers and the workers themselves and it should devise a means whereby it can protect itself. One way is to make the Arbitration Board operative with justice insured for all parties. And to act promptly is another essential factor to success.

A RIGHTEOUS MOVEMENT

The state humane society is now demanding of the wealthy stock owners of Eastern Oregon action which is long past due. And that is that the ruthless starvation and freezing of thousands of their sheep and cattle every winter on the open range while their owners dwell in luxury in California climate must cease. These stockmen price their herds and plan their business allowing for the suffering and death of a certain percentage of these flocks and herds every winter without regard to the inhuman aspect of the procedure.

If it is wrong—and both law and society declare it is—to allow a single animal to starve or freeze in Clackamas county where or when such inhuman wrong need not be, it is just as surely wrong to deliberately figure on allowing thousands of sheep and cattle to freeze and starve in Eastern Oregon. Persons are prosecuted for mere neglect of a single dog, cat, horse, and other animal. They are likewise punished for applied cruelty such as

Wealth That Works

Money saved and deposited in a bank is wealth that works. Wealth that works is capital. Unlike brain and muscle, it does not wear out or deteriorate. It grows and improves.

The only gain from labor is what is saved. Labor, therefore, makes wealth and when wealth works it is capital.

Capital at work pays wages, which, when saved, creates more capital. Labor is the producer when labor saves.

beating the dumb creature, whether bird or beast. And this is proper. Punishment is usually not severe enough for those who neglect or abuse these dumb creatures unable to help themselves.

Why then should these owners of stock on the ranges be permitted to neglect their flocks and herds, because by so doing they can show a larger money balance than by providing food and shelter. They can and they will thus provide when the law compels them to do so.

It is now but a few months before the rigors of winter on the Eastern plains will again set in. The State Humane Society and the state itself should demand that the practices of animal neglect for dollars should be no longer tolerated ANYWHERE in the commonwealth.

And the local "Mourning sheet" having guessed wrong on its "Eleventh hour" proclamation has yet a crumb of comfort—School District Number 62 is still within the "fold."

BANNER THOUGHTS IN POETRY

GO PLANT A TREE
(By Ella Wheeler Wilcox)

Oh! What a joy it is to plant a tree!
And from the fallow earth to watch it rise,
Lifting its emerald branches to the skies
In silent adoration; and to see
Its strength and glory waxing with each spring.
Yes, tis a goodly and a gladsome thing
To plant a tree.

Nature has many marvels; but a tree
Seems more than marvelous; it is Divine.

So generous, so tender, so benign,
Not garrulous, like the rivers, and yet free
In pleasant converse with the winds
And birds.

Oh, privilege beyond explaining words,
To plant a tree!

Rocks are majestic; but, unlike a tree,
They stand aloof and silent. In the roar
Of ocean billows breaking on the shore
There sounds the voice of turmoil
But a tree—

Speaks ever of companionship and rest.
Yea, of all righteous acts, this is best—
To plant a tree.

There is an oak—oh, how I love that tree!
Which has been thriving for a hundred years.

Each day I send my blessing through the spheres
For one who gave this triple boon to me
Of growing beauty, singing birds and shade.
Wouldst thou win laurels which shall never fade?
Go plant a tree!
