Many an automobile fails to deliver the power and speed of which it is capable, fails in acceleration and on the hills, because of poor lubrication.

The purpose of lubrication is to reduce friction. In this connection it must be remembered that oils have internal or molecular friction. The heavier the oil the more this internal friction, which has to be overcome by and uses up power.

The ideal oil for the automobile is the thinnest oil which will keep the bearing surfaces separated, and at the same time offer in itself the least frictional resistance to the engine power going to the rear or driving wheels.

Such an oil-if it has "olliness," stability and purity,-will give perfect lubrication, and permit the development of the maximum power, speed and gasoline mileage of the car.

Zerolene meets these conditions perfectly. Oiliness-Stability-Purity

Zerolene has great "oiliness," which causes it to cling to bearing surfaces while offering in itself a minimum of frictional resistance to the engine power.

It has great stability, which causes it to resist engine beat and to form a minimum of carbon of a soft, flaky nature which goes out with the exhaust And it is pure.

If you follow the Zerolene chart of Correct Linbrication, you will develop the maximum power, speed and gasoline mileage of your car.
