What about carbon?

Chemical analysis shows that all lubricating oils are composed of about 85% carbon and 15% hydrogen in chemical combination.

All lubricating oils form carbon when burned in the combustion chamber. The important thing to determine is the amount and kind of carbon formed by the oil.

Some oils form a good deal of carbon, some a small amount; some produce hard, finny carbon which will cause a great deal of trouble; others produce a soft, flaky carbon that will do no damage.

The important factors determining the amount and kind of carbon formed by a lubricating oil are the crude from which it is made, the process and care of refining it, its purity and stability.

Advantages of Crude and Vacuum Refining

Great care is exercised in selecting the crudes from which Zerolene is made, to secure only those which contain the most desirable lubricating values and at the same time as little as possible, if any, of the undesirable hydrocarbons such as wax and asphaltum.

In selecting crudes for Zerolene, the Standard Oil Company has the advantage of its own large production of practically every type of crude oil. For this reason the company is not compelled to use any particular crude because it happens to be the only one available.

These selected crudes, carefully refined by our own patented, high-vacuum process, produce in Zerolene, oils of the highest lubricating value, which, when burned in the combustion chamber, develop a very small amount of carbon of a soft, flaky nature, which can do no harm and usually blows out entirely with the exhaust.
