Anyone who loves flowers would be interested in seeing the rare and beautiful "Black Idol" lilies in the garden of Mrs. Kyser, of Capitol Hill. Several years ago, Mrs. Duett, who is an extensive traveler, saw these lilies blooming in China, and was so enraptured with them, that she brought a number of the bulbs with her upon her return to this country.

Mrs. Kyser received as a present, six bulbs, which are blooming. The lily is shaped similar to a calla lily, the corolla being nearly a foot long, tapering to a point, an exquisite maroon color, with the pistil, nearly as long, being a dead black color. A curious fact of this plant is that the calyx is shaped like a cup, and the first few days the flower blooms, it gives off a strong odor, which attracts flies and bugs, and draws them down into the calyx, where the plant feeds upon them. As many as a cup full of flies have been seen in one flower.
