"Flag of the free heart's hope and home!
By Angels' hands to valor given;
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in Heaven.
Forever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe but falls before us.
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us."

THE GLAD AWAKENING:—As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness.—Psalm 17:15

ANOTHER PAGE

The nineteen hundred twenty-two Chautauqua has come and gone. The program, on the whole, was unusually well-balanced. There were no great personal illuminations such as have graced the platform occasionally in previous years, but all have been uniformly good.

However, there have been missed in the music the old time plantation songs and melodies so enjoyed by the patrons. Absent also was the type of man like Bryan, rianley, Sunday and others who in past years have electrified their audiences with messages of achievement and distinguished personality. From such speakers as Evans and Peet there were messages of current betterment of real value, while the musicians and entertainers entertained and delighted generally.

The flapper-clad and semi-jazz were on hand to cater to and cultivate the taste of those who would sit for hours through a program of next to nothingness and then greet the speakers of national reputation and with message of real genuine value intellectual, moral and spiritual, and even interspersed by wit and humor, by their absence.

And the flapper-clad peek-a-boo-tailored individual has no place on the Chautauqua platform and by the good judgment of the management they are now few and should grow speedily less.

With the passing of this annual event there is left an impress upon those who attended and through their influence, upon others of the community for great and lasting good.

Those who enjoyed the music, lectures and other regular features of the program including the recreational will have higher future aspirations, and a keener discrimination for the best and noblest things in life. Here is commendation for this another uplifting page in life's great book.

THE GOVERNMENT SUPREME

Two strikes of nation-wide importance are on at one and the present time. In both, the public is an interested party. President Harding with the machinery of government at his command, has served the ultimatum to the coal miners and operators—settle your differences or the government will take over the mines. This is in the interests of the public, who must have coal next winter or freeze while in idleness.

The same ultimatum might result, in the case of the railroad strike, in government ownership as there is current suggestion that this is the desire of the Unions involved. It is even suggested in some quarters that both operators and striking organizations are agreeable to the present move in order to retain high freight and passenger rates and high wages.

But the millions of the public, vastly in the majority, demand a reduction of rates that the producers may feed

AT MORNING

By Norma Daniel Arant

This morning is so beautiful with mellow sunshine, bracing air. The breeze laid soft, cool fingers on my face and hair, awakening me to a sense of praise for such beauty and quiet. There is no sound save the lilt of birds in matin hymn. Behind the billowing curtains, are charming glimpses of a scene fresh and peaceful, beneath a sky of clear and tender blue, like babies' eyes.

The sunshine, still so young, falls over all in a silvery light, casting oblongs of shade west-side the trees. A field of delicate gray-green spreads out before dark firs, which, in irregularly pointed line, form the horizon.

Nearer is a tree with drooping limbs a softened, flattened pyramid in shape. I gaze into the lace-like tracery of tree-tops close by. Beyond the gently waving grasses and fluttering leaves, —dancing fairies—, a graceful, waving walnut bough of feathery fronds is sketched against the sky. A hummingbird flashes toward me, hovers a moment o'er a rose, and darts away.

"I arouse from dreaming; I, too, must be astir, for care ereasing, for strength renewed, for soul refreshed, there dwells in my heart this prayer: "Dear God, for such a gem-like gift to pladden all my busy way, I fain would rise in gratitude, fulfill with joy by task this day."

A mother was looking over a box of old photographs and her little boy was an interested watcher by her side. As one picture came into view the boy exclaimed, "Whenever I see a picture of Auntie Gertrude it makes me feel hungry." Afterwards he explained that it was because she brought him so many good things to eat.

The Aunt referred to was a very busy woman, yet she always managed to find time to slip a gingerbread man, or a popcorn ball, or a surprise pack-age into her bag for the children where she visited. Another child never forgot a basket trimmed with colored tissue paper, holding home baked cookies that her aunt brought to her after she had been sick.

Food plays an important part in a child's life and a mother may teach by it as well as by other things. All children love surprises, and little faces brighten on stormy days when a raisin cake baked in their own little pan appears, or a lunch-box dinner is placed on the playroom table with dainty sandwiches and fruit, and maybe a bit of candy or a few nuts.

Any little boy or girl likes to learn to cook when mother is cooking and though that is not an especially good time for mother in one way, yet in another way it is the best time, for children are happy when busy and learn quickly when interested. When mother makes bread, the little tot should have a ball of dough and a raisin or a bit of jam to make a biscuit. If the child has dishes big enough,—and this is important, for there should be a small pan or unbreakable dish to do the cooking in,—the work can be done exactly as mother does it and therefore come the first lessons in cooking.

"I could turn those doughnuts," suggested a small boy to his grandmother, who was making the toothsome goodies. She started to turn him away as she was busy and a bit nervous, but thought better of it and showed the child just how carefully it must be done. Consequently he turned every single one in a most grown-up way and informed the family proudly that night "Grandma and I made doughnuts today."

The ten cent store has many a small tin and enamel pan that would make a start towards a little girl's cooking set, an dwould give her much pleasure and profit if she learned to take care of the pans and to cook simple things in them. The best way of all is to suggest to a child that a biscuit be made for daddy's supper, or a tiny cake as a surprise for a playmate. Thus the lessons in cooking and giving, planning and unselfishness are learned together.

The demand is upon the government through the chief Executive to keep transportation active in the public interest. And to this end the absolute authority of the United States government must be exercised. In this test it must be supreme.

THE PUBLIC'S INTEREST

In outlining his plan for government arbitration in the coal strike President Harding puts the matter of settlement up to the striking miners and the operators and definitely proposes a way to go about it without loss of dignity to either side in the controversy.

The plan is to provide a non-partisan commission in which the Union of Mine Workers and the Operators shall have equal representation of three persons each while the government itself would have five. This gives the parties to the controversy the majority on the commission.

The President makes clear the position of the government in these words:

"The government prefers you who are parties to the dispute should settle it among yourselves because you best understand all the problems involved. The government cannot settle it for you. It will force no man to work against his free will, it will force no man to employ men against the free exercise of an employer's rights. The government will not be partisan, but the government is concerned with coal production sufficient to meet the industrial and transportation requirements of the country, and to safeguard against a fuel famine when winter comes again, and it is desired to have production resumed at once."

And in recognizing that the public has major rights which must be protected the President strengthens his position as chief executive.

In taking the lead in settlement of labor disputes the government is doing its duty by all its citizens without reference to the technicalities of organized power. With its sole aim the public good and with this purpose only in view the government can act more impartially than either party to the controversy or any other agency. May the Chief Executive insist upon the settlement as proposed. All unprejudiced citizenship will hail the day when all industrial disputes will submit thus to arbitration.

COMMENDABLE PROGRESS

Among the bills presented to the Board of Directors of the Oregon City schools for June was an item by the Mourning Enterprise for $109.55 for printing and election supplies. This was the only item of this kind. The said "M. E.'s." bereavement over the results of the late school election is here easily recognized as one of REAL GRIEF. A new deal in which there will be a more equitable distribution of the district's patronage was made at this meeting. And the suggestion is right, timely and will, when put into effect, be of real value to the district.

The effort of the majority of the present board and the clerk to place school affairs above the reach of selfish interests, official arrogance and social or political cliques, will find a genuine response in renewed public confidence and an increased interest in the schools.

WHOLE LOAF OR NONE

The Irish rebellion continues in all its fury with the Free State authorities gaining ground. De Valera refuses the half loaf even if he loses the whole. He has yet to learn the principle upon which all permanent governments are founded—that the majority rules.

Vernon Chantler Injured
Vernon Chantler met with a serious accident Sunday afternoon. While diving in the Clackamas river, above the railroad bridge, he struck his forehead on a sharp ledge cutting a gash three and one-half inches long. Although partially stunned he swam ashore and was taken to the home of W. Ranch. Dr. Guy Mount was called and it was necessary to take several stitches in the forehead.

Makes Comforts Clean and Keeps Them Fluffy

The big problem in laundering comforts is not the washing of them, but the drying of them. It is no easy matter to force the thick, dripping mass through a wringer, and drying the comfort by hand is even a harder task.

But the Laun-Dry-Ette makes this work easy. It washes the comfort for you, and then dries it. And the beauty of the Laun-Dry-Ette Way is that the comfort is not flattened out by a wringer—but comes out of the Laun-Dry-Ette clean and fluffy, and dry for the line.

The LAUN-DRY-ETTE ELECTRIC WASHING MACHINE does your hardest task for you. It not only washes the heavy pieces, but dries them, too.
