RECIPES

The following recipe was invented by the royal cook of England, for Marie Stuart and it was a favorite with Queen Victoria and Napoleon Bonaparte:

Cook 2 large onions with 2 pieces of celery, both cut up, in 2 ounces of butter. Add some parsley, thyme, and a bay leaf; 1 chicken, cut into joints, and 2 quarts of water. Simmer for 4 hours. Take out the chicken, cut the meat off the wings and breast into dice, and keep the dark meat for salad. Chop 1 dozen blanched almonds, the yolks of 2 hard boiled eggs and 2 slices of bread soaked in milk. Pound these with the meat and press through a sieve. Add to the soup, strained, 1 cup of boiling cream or rich milk, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Serve at once, hot.
