The steamer Salem still lies on the sunken wharf at the brick mill and Captain Taylor has given up all hope of floating her till the June freshet. Workmen are repairing the boat so she will be in good condition when high water releases her.

Elmer Dixon, the popular poultry man of Ely, has been shipping single birds, pairs and trios at fancy prices, but on Tuesday he undoubtedly shipped the finest coop of brown leghorns ever sent out of Oregon City, to a party in St. John's; price $20.

Sheriff Samson brought E. B. Clements, of Eagle Creek, who was reported to be insane, to Oregon City last week, but after an examination into his mental condition he was adjudged sane and discharged. The expense to the county for this alarm was somewhere in the neighborhood of $33.

The old bulk on the river bank a short distance above Fulton is generally pointed out as the wreck of the old Ohio, the first light draft boat on the Willamette. It is true that that is the hull of the Ohio, but her machinery and some of the timbers of the upper works went into the Salem which is the successor of that pioneer shallow water boat.

THE GRAND ARMY BOYS.

Meade Post Has a Camp Fire Monday Night.

Meade post of the Grand Army had a camp fire last Monday night. About fifteen of the comrades from Portland were up here for the occasion among them being Department Commander O. Summers, Junior Vice Deputy Commander C. P. Halloway, Aid de Camp D. S. Stearns of the national organization, C. H. Dubois, W. W. Jacques, I. A. Morehead, W. N. Morse, F. Swan and Mr. Bottsford.

The members of the post and relief corps were led to the Knights of Pythias hall by the Willamette cornet band to the strains of "Marching through Georgia." There was an address of welcome by Commander Parker which was responded to by Department Commander Summers who took occasion to give some interesting facts about the order. He said there was an active membership of about 25000 now in the state, being an increase of 300 members during the past year. But the boys of the faded blue are growing old—getting beyond the age when they leave their firesides for outside amusements and fraternal associations so it is not probable that there will be material gains in the numerical strength of the order hereafter. The old comrades are dropping away and the work will before long descend to the Sons of Veterans.

Toastmaster C. H. Dauchy proposed "The Old Flag," which was the toast responded to by D. H. Stearns who felt Oregon City precinct No. 1.—Beginning spoke of the inspiring effect of the star and stripes upon the man who loves his country. To those who had seen the emblem bathed in blood and who had shed blood in the defense of it it had a deeper significance than to others.

C. P. Holloway paid an eloquent tribute to "The Grand Army" speaking of its beneficent offices and patriotic sentiments.

Charles Dubois was so overcome by the subject of his toast "The Woman of the Relief Corps," that his response was a very brief one.

C. E. Brownell, Esq., responded to the toast "Patriotic Men and Woman of the Republic." He related some of the experiences that came to him as a boy during the war time in the mountain home of the family in the Empire state. The patriotism of those who could not go to the front was sometimes even greater than that of those who could join actively in the struggle to preserve the flag and human liberty.

Captain Shaw talked about "The Army Bean." His remarks were humorous and brought everybody on such familiar terms with the bean that they were desirous of continuing the acquaintance and an adjournment was taken to the dining hall where the ladies of the Relief Corps served pork and beans, sandwiches, cake and coffee to the crowd. The occasion abounded in fun and reminiscence and it was thoroughly enjoyed by the members and guests of Meade post. After supper the post held a secret session at its hall.
