The Oregon City Cigar factory has been sold by August Fisher to M. Gardner, of Portland, who took possession February 1. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher have removed to Fisher's mill where they will be engaged in business. Mr. Gardner proposes to push the cigar business in an enterprising manner.

Last Friday some railroad men were blasting rock to improve the track a short distance above Canemah when one blast resulted in breaking the telegraph wires—five of them. The lines were gotten in working order before noon, however, so the interruption to telegraphic service was not long.

Mrs. D. A. Eastham, of Silverton, died Thursday night. She was a daughter of the late Benjamin Cleaver, and mother of J. E. Eastham, of Salem, and the late E. L. Eastham, of Oregon City, and Mrs. Van Scoy, of Turner. She was a highly respected pioneer lady of Silverton.

The report of the commissioner of the general land office shows that the Oregon City land district is third in importance in the United States. Seattle is first and La Grande is second. The gross receipts found in these offices respectively is as follows: Seattle, $345,078.55; La Grande, $264,094.04; Oregon City, $186,845.23.

A call has been issued for the meeting of delegates representing the People's party at Oregon City in March, but the call states that this convention will be governed by the national convention which meets February 22, for the purpose of consolidating all reform elements into one party. If that convention should decide not to consolidate and not put a ticket in the field, it will have a modifying influence on state conventions.

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

"I wish we women had some place of entertainment and instruction," a matron was overheard to remark at a recent social gathering in Oregon City. "The men have their lodges and club rooms sumptuously furnished and stylishly maintained. They meet companions there any evening and amuse themselves in various ways, gather information from one another and enjoy free and easy sociability. We women folks have nothing of the kind and I don't wonder that some of us seek relief in gossip that in more or less idle and possibly a little tainted."

"Yes," replied her companion, "the men have many advantages of this kind that we cannot enjoy, but it would be impossible for us to provide elegantly furnished halls or club rooms without disrupting the family. These things cost the men a good deal of money and our husbands would never stand it to have us spending similar sums for similar purposes. You know how grudgingly we get even a very small allowance for church work. The men have been spending hundreds of dollars for their high-toned lodges so long that they regard it as a matter of course, but they would pronounce a woman's club a baneful and unholy novelty. La, me! I wish it were otherwise."

"I don't care," rejoined the matron who began the conversation, "the women of other towns are not so confined as we are in Oregon City and I believe we could find some means of healthy and profitable diversion. I don't see why we couldn't do something for ourselves here if we should try."

It isn't at all necessary to call attention to the condition of Main street; it commands for itself the entire attention of the people who have occasion to travel it. But that nothing is done to remedy its shocking condition is a shame to the officials entrusted with the duty of looking after the public welfare. Primarily the street is passable, as streets go, but with the lack of sewerage and the accumulated filth of a whole year—for I am informed that the street has not been cleaned during this period—the main business street of a city of 5000 souls is in a state infinitely worse than that of the worst country roads, through the neglect of those whose duty it is to attend to it. To be sure the mud is not so deep as on some of the country roads, but think of its composition! The street is a slimy, quivering, sickening river of filth several inches deep from curbstone to curbstone. It is not creditable to anybody that this is true.

Of course we ought to have a sewerage system, and that we have not may be charged up to that spirit of petty jealousy or selfish greed that has cropped out in the city council on more than one occasion. I suppose there never was a municipal board entirely free of this smallness, but in the respect that affects the sewerage matter there is enough greedophobia in the Oregon City council to inoculate a pretty large body. I believe the Enterprise touched upon this point some time ago. If I were running a newspaper I would keep the matter sizzling hot.

But in the absence of sewers there is no excuse for not cleaning Main street. Once a year, forsooth! Once a month is too seldom. Instead of wallowing in the slime eleven months of the year and then spending several hundred dollars in a grand scooping up of the soupy street, why not have a garbage wagon once a week, or at least once a month, gather up the dirt and rubbish which the business men shall have been required to collect in compact heaps in front of their establishments? This would not cost more than the present slovenly habit and it is a method much in vogue in civilized communities. This last is another reason why we might profitably imitate the custom.

ROUNDABOUT.

Next Monday will be the regular meeting of the board of trade. It will be inauguration meeting and there should be a full attendance.

Last week a Chinaman by the name of Wong Ching was bound over to the grand jury on the charge of indecent exposure, his bond being fixed by Justice Fouts at $500. Wednesday he was bailed out by two Chinese merchants from Portland.

The Chinese market gardener who peddles green groceries in this city has a pair of roadsters. A short time ago they gave an exhibition of their speed by cantering gracefully around a block and then sowing vegetables up Main street. They were caught a short distance above Canemah and some kind-hearted citizens of that burg repaired his wagon and sent the Chinaman on his way rejoicing. Last Wednesday the perverse beasts took another frolic, this time going down Main street on a tour of exploration. Not much damage was done, but their proprietor thinks that they too much foolee allee time.

St. Valentine will make headquarters at Huntley's bookstore from the 8th to the 15th.

Died.

HAGEY—At Wright's Springs, Oregon, Saturday, January 30, 1892, Matthias Hagey, aged seventy years.

Mr. Hagey was a pioneer of 1848, coming with his wife from Iowa and settling on French prairie. Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Hagey went to live with their daughter, Mrs. Levi Stehman, at Wright's Springs, on the Molalla, where the old gentleman died. He had suffered from heart trouble for a long time. Mrs. Hagey survives. The burial was in Mountain View cemetery in this city last Monday, Rev. Edward Gittens of the M. E. church officiating.

The surviving children of the deceased are A. W. Hagey, a Molalla farmer, Mrs. Levi Stehman of Wright's Springs, Mrs. Mary E. Hamilton of this city, and Mrs. Alice James of Ranier. Mr. Hagey was a man of considerable force of character, of the stuff that makes successful pioneers. He was not obtrusive and did not occupy a prominent place in politics, but he was well known and esteemed by the old settlers in the lower Willamette valley.

PARTLOW—Near Mount Pleasant, January 29, 1892, Frances L., wife of W. B. Partlow, aged sixty-two years, five months, twenty-four days.

The death of Mrs. Partlow was a surprise to all. She was sick only one week, and peacefully passed away last Friday, January 29. Her funeral was held at her home Tuesday, February 2.

Mrs. Frances L. Partlow, daughter of Sisson and Dorothy H. Chase, was born August 5, 1828, at Bristol, Addison county, Vermont. She lived there until 1842, when she removed with her family to Hancock county, Illinois. Remaining there until 1845, she, with her parents, removed to Council Bluffs, Iowa. In 1850 they turned their faces westward and spent the winter in Ogden, Utah. Taking up the line of march they arrived in Oregon City in the summer of 1851. She remained with her family until married to W. B. Partlow in Oregon City, June 8, 1857. The result of this union was three sons, James W., born March 15, 1859, Richard Sisson, born August 18, 1860, who died in his infancy, and Edgar Ballanger, born July 2, 1864, who lived only two years and four months.

Having no daughter of her own Mrs. Partlow took into her family Annie E. Howland, to be brought up and treated as her own child. Little Annie was only nine years old when she was received into this family. She was treated and loved as an own child, and in return gave the respect and love of a daughter. A more loving, dutiful child a mother never had.

Too much cannot be said of the generous disposition of our departed friend. No one came to her hungry without being fed, and she always had a willing hand outstretched to the needy.

The funeral was largely attended by old and sympathetic friends. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. C. Reed, of Portland.
