The Presidential Outlook.

Polities, national, state and local, are getting interesting. Oregon takes a livelier interest in the political kaleidoscope than most states this early in the season, because national aspect. It will elect two congressmen next June-five months earlier than any other state-and considerable signifiuce attaches to the result here in view of the important issues before the country.

The withdrawal of Mr. Blaine left President Harrison by far the strongest man in tain Apperson is worth $100,000 and escapes the field for nomination by the Minneapolis convention. But with such possibilities as Gresham, Lincoln, Culiom, Alger, Rusk and Blair being talked of it is by no means certain that Harrison will hold his pre-eminence till the close of the convention. Nothing is surer, too, than that no candicandidate will be considered by the voters. The tariff and the money question will be

The German Empire Breaking.

The German people lack a good deal of eing as prosperous and contented under William II, as they were under the benign rule of his generifather. One of the reasons for this condition of affairs is that they have not the confidence in the young man that they had in his more mature and less egotistical presecessors. His father for the few mouths of his reign enjoyed the love and respect accorded the first William, but this youth is too green in state craft and possesses such an exaggerated blea of his own importance in the affairs of the universe that he is ridicaled more than respecial.
