

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

It Meets in Portland and Nominates a Ticket.

The republican state convention met in Portland last Wednesday, continued its session on Thursday and is still at work when this paper goes to press.

In the first congressional district Binger Herman of Roseburg was nominated by acclamation. In the second district W. R. Ellis of Heppner was nominated for congressman.

The nominations for presidential electors were J. F. Caples of Portland, H. B. Miller of Grant's Pass, W. D. Hare of Hillsboro and Rev. G. M. Irwin of Union.

F. A. Moore of St. Helens was nominated for supreme judge, T. A. McBride of this city for judge of the fifth judicial circuit and W. N. Barrett of Hillsboro for prosecuting attorney in this district, the latter two being nominated by acclamation.

Peter Paquet is Clackamas county's representative on the state central committee. The Clackamas county delegates in the convention were F. Jagger, George C. Brownell, E. M. Rands, Chas. Holman, H. H. Johnson, H. E. Cross, C. F. Clark, G. W. Prosser, Peter Paquet and H. DuBois by J. T. Apperson proxy.

The convention was called to order in Masonic hall by chairman Lotan and Rufus Mallory of Portland, was chosen temporary chairman. E. M. Rands of Oregon City, and J. B. Eddy of Pendleton, were elected secretaries. The temporary organization was subsequently made permanent. Apperson, Paquet, Clark and Brownell of the Clackamas delegation took an important part in the proceedings. Brownell was called on and made a rousing address for which he was much complimented.

Captain Apperson's resolution providing for separate congressional district organizations was adopted and he was made the Clackamas county representative on the first congressional district committee.

Miss Cornelia McCown, who has been visiting relatives in Walla Walla some time returned home this week.

Thos. Charman & Son handle J. A. Folger & Son's celebrated Golden Gate baking powder and to each of their patrons are given a valuable cook book.

Shetchick's flouring mill at New Era commenced work Wednesday morning after putting in a complete new outfit of roller process machinery. It has a capacity of forty barrels of flour daily.

E. J. McKittrick found a strange bird with a disabled wing at the door of his store Sunday morning which he is nursing back to good health. It is thought to be one of the finches imported from Germany two years ago.

Misses Cassie Eaton and Ivy Roake, whose birthday is the same, had a party at James Roake's last Monday to celebrate the event. There was a large company of little Misses present and a happy time was enjoyed.

C. Spangler and A. C. Tower returned last week from Independence where they have completed a hundred-barrel flouring mill. This week they left for Forest Grove to build a seventy-five barrel mill for Portland contractors.

In the adultery suit wherein S. Reizenstein is the complainant and Arthur Haigh and Mrs. Reizenstein co-defendants, examination was waived and the defendants will appear before the grand jury. The complaining witness skipped out Monday morning but returned that night.

There is a prospect that the Oregon City cannery will be operated this season. Arrangements are now being made whereby the establishment will be put in running order and the capital furnished for purchasing fruit and vegetables and for the necessary labor. It will employ 200 or more hands. The enterprise is worthy of hearty encouragement.

M. H. Wallace, the Mulino merchant, made complaint against one, Wiseman, for burglarizing his store early in the week. Goods were missed from the store and tracks were followed leading to a stump where the articles were found. The tracks were like those of Wiseman. The hearing is in progress before Justice Fouts.

WOOLEN MILL STRIKE

AN OBNOXIOUS FOREMAN THE CAUSE OF THE DIFFICULTY.

The Matter Finally Submitted to a Board of Arbitration Whose Decision is Accepted by Both Sides.

Shortly after 8 o'clock last Friday morning some forty-three weavers at the Oregon City woolen mill left their looms and demanded the removal of their foreman, Arthur Haigh, who, they said, was obnoxious to them. Saturday they were joined by the hands of the carding and finishing rooms, in fact every department was vacated except the spinning room. The spinners went out Monday. The five or six weavers who remained at their looms when the others quit afterward signed the agreement not to work and every part of the big factory was idle. Altogether there were about 230 hands out on the strike.

It appeared that there had been a growing dislike of the foreman of the weaving room for some time. The weavers said he was prone to credit them on the books from which the pay roll is made up with less work than is shown on the tags he attaches to the goods turned out from the looms. Whenever this was detected it was corrected but the weavers, who are paid by the yard, think such errors were made altogether too often. They also allege that the foreman often used ungentlemanly and sometimes insulting language to the female hands. The fact that he was recently made co-defendant in an adultery case considerably increased the dislike of him among the weavers and it did not require much to move them to action.

The strike was precipitated by Minnie Mosberger, who left her loom in disobedience of the rules and was talking with another weaver some distance away. Foreman Haigh says he had repeatedly warned her not to do this and on this occasion he took the belt off her loom. Stopping a loom in this manner is discharging the weaver. Miss Mosberger left the room and appealed to Superintendent Gary Jacobs who said she could resume work and sent word by her for the fixer to readjust the belt on her loom. This the foreman would not permit, claiming that orders of that kind must come through him and that he had no knowledge that Superintendent Jacobs had given such an order. Then a personal altercation between Foreman Haigh and Fixer Lindsay occurred and the weavers quit their looms and went out on a strike.

The Jacobs brothers, the principal owners of the factory, declined to accede to the demand for the discharge of Haigh. He came from the Globe mills at Utica, N. Y., mills of the very highest standing, he was well recommended and had given satisfaction to his employers during the thirteen months he had been here. They had not previously had any knowledge of dissatisfaction among the weavers with their foreman and the manner of this demand was deemed such as to render compliance with it out of the question. There was entire good feeling between the hands and their employers but the weavers would not stand their boss and the company was not willing to accede to a demand which was regarded as dictatorial. The hands were given until Monday to return to work, except Lindsay, who was barred from entering the mill again.

The weavers would not consent to resume work under Foreman Haigh. Monday, however, arbitration as a means of harmonizing the difference was suggested and both sides consented to submit the matter to an arbitration board. The committee appointed by the weavers to look after their interests consisted of Fred Metzner, Charles Rose, John Thomas, James Wilkinson and Arthur Diedy. This committee chose W. W. Myers, G. R. H. Miller and John Shade to represent them. On the part of the factory T. W. Sullivan, H. C. Steyens and J. H. Burghardt were selected. In case of being unable to agree they were to select a seventh member who should cast the deciding vote. The board of arbitration met in Fountain Hose company's room and the witnesses selected to give testimony before it occupied the council room adjoining. Mr. Sullivan was made chairman and Mr. Myers secretary of the board. Twenty-seven or twenty-eight witnesses were heard, including Mr. Haigh himself. This testimony was completed early in the evening. It covered all points complained of by the strikers. It was near midnight when the decision was reached.

The arbitrators found that Haigh had been guilty of using improper language and that the errors in the credits for work had been made. It also found that the weavers had not treated the foreman with proper respect. While recommending a change of conduct on both sides the offense of the foreman was deemed of sufficient importance to warrant the conclusion of the board that Mr. Haigh tender his resignation to the company to take effect within sixty days and that the weavers return to work under him for that period. This would give the company time to get a new man for the place and the weavers could better afford to work under the present foreman sixty days longer than to cause the factory to close and themselves remain out of employment. This decision was accepted by both sides and Tuesday morning the factory whistle blew at the usual hour and work was resumed in all departments as if there had been no interruption. Everything is working smoothly now.

The loss to the company by reason of the strike was several hundred dollars and the workmen lost still more. Still it is fortunate that the matter was adjusted so easily and there seems to be no reason for any further trouble. No violence of any sort was threatened or attempted during the continuance of the strike. The strikers included many of the best citizens of the town. All were well-behaved and seemed disposed to be fair and it is probably due to this spirit that a conclusion so favorable to the strikers was reached.

Brief State News.

A new paper appeared at Springfield, Lane county, the first of April. It is called "The Messenger."

The Pacific Coast Prospecting & Development company is the name of a new company about to be incorporated at Springfield, Lane county, for the purpose of locating and developing mines in the rich mineral district east of there. The organization will consist of several leading citizens of Springfield and Eugene, incorporating with $100,000.

Things are moving in the matter of Astoria's railroad. The West Shore mills are sawing on a contract for lumber for trestle work, about a million feet. Contracts are being made, ties are being purchased, pile drivers engaged, more surveyors put in the field, and everything seems to be moving smoothly ahead. Pretty soon it will be a matter of course that Astoria is to have a railroad in the next two years, and likely at least one more.

For 25 cents you can get the Enterprise until June 10th.

Weak Lungs

May be made to do good service through a long life by a judicious use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The signs of weakness are "shortness of breath," pains in the chest and back, a persistent cough, feverishness, and raising of blood. All or either of these symptoms may indicate weak lungs, and should have immediate attention.

"I have been a life-long sufferer from weak lungs and, till I used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, was scarcely ever free from a cough. This medicine always relieves my cough and strengthens my lungs, as no other medicine ever did. I have induced many of my acquaintances to use the Pectoral in throat and lung troubles. It has always proved beneficial, particularly so in the case of my son-in-law, Mr. Z. A. Snow, of this place, who was cured by it of a severe cough."—Mrs. L. I. Cloud, Benton, Ark.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, PREPARED BY Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price 25c; six bottles, $1.50.
