

LIVES ON NUTS AND APPLES.

Mrs. Le Favre is a Vegetarian, a Del-sarteau and a Club Woman.

Mrs. Carria Le Favre, of Chicago, several claims to distinction not shared by many women. In the first place, she is a vegetarian so pronounced her views on the subject of vegetable diet alone that it is ten years since she has even tasted anything out of the line of cereals, fruits, vegetables and nuts. She subsists largely upon the last mentioned article of diet, and regards nuts and apples as the best and most elevating food for mankind. Once she lived three weeks upon apples alone. Apples stewed, baked, boiled and fried—but always apples.

Mrs. Le Favre's next claim to distinction is that she is a Del-sarteau who has succeeded in adapting Del-sarteau principles everyday life. "How to carry an umbrella," "How to walk," "How to look at flowers" and "How to bow" are among the accomplishments taught by Mrs. Le Favre. She has written books many short articles several books, among which are "Mother's Help and Child's Friend," "Physical Culture on Del-sarteau Principles" and "Royal Road to Beauty and Health."

Mrs. Le Favre is a member of the Woman's Press club of New York, the Woman's Press club of Chicago, the American Society for the Promotion of Physical Culture, American Society of Authors, the American Del-sarteau association, the New York club and six other clubs and societies, besides being lecturer on education in the Tourgee convalescent of Chicago.

How does one woman manage to accomplish so much? is frequently asked admiring sisters who find time pressed with not half so many engagements their hands.

Well, no one knows. But this is certain. The energetic Mrs. Le Favre finds time to attend to all her official duties, classes, etc. And in addition to these she keeps house, has many social demands, dresses in the latest styles, is always a perfect picture of blond elegance. She says it is because she is a vegetarian.

AGUSTA PRISCOTT.

ETIQUETTE OF WINE DRINKING.

Applied to Abstainers and Their Entertainers.

In these days of dinner giving and of very usual serving of wine upon the table of the rich and well to do the conscientious abstainer finds it difficult as to do his duty. He is often the object of men and women whom he feels in many respects far better than himself, and yet they serve wine, which sense of right will not allow him to take. Of course he allows the servant to fill his glass. As toasts are offered he fills his glass to his lips. Of course also says nothing to any one unless compelled to do so regarding his feelings in the matter.

There is an equally plain code, it would seem, for the host and hostess of his guest, but from the fact that it is less observed it may not perhaps be so obvious as at first it appears.

It seems reasonable that a host or hostess, upon observing that a guest sits down without course after course without taking his wine, should reflect that a notion of the subject would very likely induce embarrassment. It is a rule of society that no word should be uttered therein which may produce embarrassment. The guest presumably does not care to admit to one at whose table he is sitting, and whom he sees taking of wine and pressing it upon him, that he does not think it right to enjoy that beverage. Only a pharisee of the pharisees could relish such a view as that.

Attention, therefore, is called to his conduct he can only, as thousands have done before him, make some pretense to cover his eccentricity. He can say: "Wine does not agree with me," or "the affects my head," or his nerves are affected or something of that sort, or one of which must be true. If he had further he must of course admit that his conscience supplies his chief reason, thus indirectly condemning his host and hostess, and very likely every guest at the table.

Upon stating the case in this plain way the breach of propriety committed by those who question a guest concerning his reasons for refusing to drink becomes glaringly evident. Yet it is done constantly by otherwise well bred people. A host and hostess had never seem to observe that a guest does not drink his wine. He has expressed his good opinion of them, in general way, by appearing at their table. They should not drive him to pharisee, in such a place, whatever difficulties there may be between them.

Clady was once entertaining at lunch a woman whom she had supposed to be a lady also, and whom, although a stranger, she had called upon and invited her to table out of regard for the mutual friend for whom the party was given. Wine was served with this luncheon, and of the ladies present, a warm proposition, injudiciously remarked upon the fact. The stranger took up the subject with unnecessary energy and calmness, and the silence of the assembled company that she was rendered uncomfortable by being obliged to be so uncomfortable with wine.

The hostess, unable to endure the recitation that a partaker at her table could be afflicted with the pangs of indignation in consequence, managed to get with her strange guest for a few moments after the rest and ordered aught for her a glass of peptonizederry, the only drink of the kind which she could obtain, said which she concedingly drank.

Public School Notes.

It has been a rule in the school for the last three years to hang a banner in the room that had the best attendance for the previous month, it now hangs in the sixth grade.

Mrs. Graham is again able to resume her work as teacher of the fourth grade, after an absence of two months.

The Philomathean society met as usual Friday evening, with a very interesting program prepared. After the usual order of business the literary program was carried out. The first was the reading by Sade Chase of the Philomathean Journal, which consists of society notes, personals, advertisements, a continued story entitled "Golden Nugget" by Leighton Kelly, and poetry composed by James Church and Lawrence Driggs. I would like to give some quotations from The Journal but space will not admit. The next was a reading by Ada Hughes, and third, the debate, Resolved that "Grant was a Greater General than Napoleon." Which was decided in favor of the negative. Those on the affirmative were Lawrence Driggs, Eva Melhorn and Daniel Tompkins on the negative, Clarence Purlum, Emily Tompkins and Charles Wilson.

The recitation by Miss Lura Miller was well rendered.

Leighton Kelly and Fred Hedges deserve much credit for the way in which they rendered the farce—"Too Late for the Train."

Malcolm McCown and Harley Stevens were admitted to the society as active members.

The meeting then adjourned to meet Friday evening March 10.

Visitors to the Great Fair.

According to present indications there will be large transfers of population between New York and Chicago next summer. The Chicago women who are not identified with the various movements that their sex are undertaking are beginning to anticipate with dismay the hospitalities the great show will entail. These propose to let their houses in Chicago for the summer months, and take lodgings in this city or occupy cottages at the seaside. When these opportunities have been made known such of the New York people as expect to visit the fair have availed themselves of the chance of escaping the crowds at the hotels and the chances of boarding houses, and engaged these vacation houses. A group of people divide the time among them, succeeding one another in such installments as they may arrange, and with their own servants live as comfortably as if at home. Many New Yorkers would gladly avail themselves of such opportunities if they could be made known. If some convenient exchange of properties could be established it would be mutually beneficial. — New York Evening Sun.

Pronunciation of Two Names.

It may seem like trying to gild refined gold or paint the lily to suggest the possibility of an improvement in the pronunciation of proper names adopted by Mr. Daly's company of players, but I have always imagined that the heroine in "As You Like It" was Rosalind, with the accent on the first syllable, and that Shakespeare made a humorous point in the stretching of the pronunciation in Orlando's love verses. This point is entirely lost by pronouncing the name Rosalind, with long "i," and equal stress on first and last syllables, all through the play. The first intimation that the melancholy Jacques was a ruralized prototype of the Chatham street character also comes from Mr. Daly. George Clark is addressed in his "As You Like It" role as Jakies. Is there any authority for either of these novelties?—Cor. New York Advertiser.

A Great Bald Eagle Killed.

The largest bald eagle ever killed in this vicinity was shot in the town of Concord, a few miles west of Oconomowoc, Wis., recently by Richard Yates. It measured 7 feet 3 inches from tip to tip, and weighed eleven pounds. The talons, measured along the convex surfaces, are nearly two inches in length and very strong. It was perched upon a lofty elm, when Mr. Yates discharged both barrels of his shotgun at it simultaneously, after which the bird flew a few hundred feet and suddenly fell to the ground dead.

A golden eagle, measuring nine feet from tip to tip, was captured by Johnnie Spahnhammer, a sixteen-year-old boy, a few miles south of West Bend, Wis., on the same day. — Milwaukee Sentinel.

Rough Treatment.

"Well, Rustus, how did Christmas treat you?" "Chris'mus done treat me well enough, sah, but de Christians dey's been harassin' of me." "How was that?" "I gibs yar my wo'd, sah, a great fat plump chicking done flew into de winder o' my home de day befo' Chris'mus, sah, and I was arrested on Chris'mus day, sah, for habin dat chicking in my possession, sah. Said I stole her f'm Majah Yancy, sah; 'nd j'es because I couldn't prove what dey calls a yallerby when Mose Thompson said he seed me at de coop de night befo' dey fined me fo' dollars, sah."—Harper's Bazar.

A Gift to Gladstone.

There has been forwarded to Mr. Gladstone from Barmouth an album mounted in gold plate in commemoration of his visit to Snowdon and Barmouth. Engraved upon the large gold plate is a shield bearing the arms of Merioneth and the Welsh leek, and around the edge of the plate are the words, "Made of Welsh gold from Clogau mines, Barmouth, North Wales."—New York Press.

Condemnatory Resolutions.

The following resolutions were adopted in Highland precinct, there being about forty votes present:

We, the people of Highland precinct and vicinity in indignation assembled this 4th day of March, 1893, drew and unanimously passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we are unalterably opposed to the division of this county into five road districts and the appointment of as many road supervisors at high salaries, which we declare to be a gross injustice to the taxpayers of the county.

Resolved, That we condemn our present county court for the expenditures of the county funds in a lavish and unreasonable manner; we, also condemn our recent legislature for passing the obnoxious "Cross" road bill and for extravagant expenditures of the public funds for appropriations.

Resolved, That we are in favor of creating each school district a road district and electing the road supervisor by the people, like all true servants of the people should be and abolish the "refarious" system of appointing pets.

Resolved, That we endorse the action of Governor Penneyer in his manifold endeavors to reduce the expense of the state, and by respecting the rights of the people in vetoing the various appropriation bills passed by our last legislature.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the county court, also a copy to the ENTERPRISE and Courier for publication, and we urge the people throughout the county to assemble and oppose the proceedings of the county court everywhere.
