AMONG BUILDERS.

NUMEROUS INDUSTRIES EMPLOYING LABOR GETTING UNDERWAY.

Railroads—Power House—Factories and Other Smaller Enterprises—What is Doing

Oregon City is getting to cover a great deal of territory. It now extends from beyond the Clackamas to the Tualatin and from over a mile on the hill east of town to nearly a mile across the Willamette. Over much of this territory buildings are scattered more or less thickly and it is not easy for those who live here to keep track of all that is going on. Oregon City practically includes as a part of itself numerous communities which though in a measure separate and possessing a local name, are yet a part of this city and have interests in common with it.

Unless work is going on upon Main street which is the one common meeting ground for the people of all the city, one hardly realizes that any thing out of ordinary is doing. But while this is true the fact remains that a great deal of work is in progress in the city which is calculated to help very materially in building up the whole community. Foremost among factors prominent in building up these several improvements is the Portland General Electric company, which has several important enterprises under way, which are only delayed on account of the bad weather which has prevailed of late. Chief among these projects is the

NEW POWER HOUSE.

Which is being built between the mechanical wood pulp mill and the sulphite mill on the east side of the Willamette locks. This building is planned to be 40 feet wide by 300 feet long but only 100 feet of the total length is to be built this season. Work is now in progress, not exactly upon the building itself, but in preparing for the foundation, and for the enlarged canal. Before work can begin upon the superstructure there has to be removed a large amount of rock and dirt to get down for the foundation and for the bottom of the numerous wheel pits which will be 31 feet below the present walls of the canal. A large force of men are now engaged at this work with steam drills, derricks and all the modern appliances for doing this class of work, while another force of men are getting the coffer dam in place above the wood pulp mill so as to get down to the bed of the river to put in the concrete wall in which are to be fixed the 10 large head-gates which will supply water to the power station. From these head-gates the canal walls will be extended down and under the pulp mill, through the old basin and past the several mills till they ultimately connect with the masonry work just at the head of the lower sets of gates. One object aimed at in the construction of this wall is to secure a large and unvarying body of water to be drawn from to operate the electrical machinery so as to give uniform motion. These walls are to be built of solid concrete and will be as enduring as time itself.

THE ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

The Portland General Electric company is also building their electric line from the west end of the suspension bridge up to the Tualatin and have quite a force of men at this work. The bad weather compelled them to stop all grading for a time but on Saturday last some rock men were put on and with the advent of good weather teams and graders will be kept busy again. This electric road is to be standard gauge and will in point of construction and equipment be second to none. As a matter of fact it will be the very best in the United States. Twelve car loads of steel rails are now enroute from Bessemer Colorado and four more are yet to be shipped. These rails are the very best 56 pound which is equal to those used on many of the first-class railroads of this country. The cars are being made in Pennsylvania and will be supplied with all the latest modern improvements including vestibuled arrangements. Except in interior finish they will be as convenient and comfortable as a railway coach. There are to be two of them speeded to 30 miles per hour which will enable them to make a trip from each end of the road as frequent as once in 10 minutes or oftner. Besides the road itself the company has the plans prepared and is getting ready to erect an

ELEGANT RAILROAD BUILDING.

Near the west end of the suspension bridge. This will be used as railway, electric and land office together with waiting rooms and neat covered sheds into which the cars will be run so that passengers may get on and off of the cars without getting either head or foot wet. This building is to be fitted up in the latest modern style and will be both very useful and ornamental.

THE GLADSTONE ELECTRIC LINE.

Some two weeks ago work was begun on the Gladstone Branch of the East Side Electric Railway, but the wet weather delayed its construction. This road is to extend from four blocks beyond the Clackamas bridge to beyond the county road near the Gladstone sawmill, and will be substantially constructed with no grades and laid with 40 pound iron. A special car will be run between the terminus of the road and Third street in this city making half hourly trips. It is not likely to be ready for operation before May 15th.

THE NEW ICE WORKS.

This is an entirely new industry being established by Messrs Smith and Lovett who will be ready prior to May 10th to supply customers with ice in any quantities. The machinery is now here and is being put in place by T. L. Armstrong of the Oakland Iron Works who has a large force of men at work getting it in place. This will when completed be the largest ice factory on the coast. In addition to the manufacture of ice the company will establish cold storage works.
